1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess, is Too bad for bad report : and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,—alack, good man !
And therefore banish'd) is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth ?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root :
His father

Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan ;

But had his titles by Tenantius's, whom
He served with glory and admired success :

So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus :
And had, besides this gentleman in question,

Two other sons, who, in the wars o'the time, Died with their swords in hand ; for which their father [row,

SCENE II. The same.

Enter the Queen, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assured, you shall not find

Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys [mus,

I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril :—
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections ; though the king

[Exit Queen.

And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes ; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen ! my mistress !
O, lady, weep no more ; lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man ! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.

But he does buy my injuries, to be friends ;

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow : Adieu !

Imo. Nay, stay a little :

Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love ;
This diamond was my mother's : take it

But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

And sear up* my embracements from a next

As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss ; so, in our trifles
I still win of you : For my sake, wear this ;
It is a manacle of love ; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.

Imo. O, the gods !

When shall we see again ?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king !

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid ! hence, from my sight !

If, after this command, thou fraught ‡ the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest : Away !
Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you !

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth ; thou heapest

You bred him as my playfellow; and he is
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, sir: Heaven restore me!—
Would I were
A neat-herd's* daughter! and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.
Cym. Thou foolish thing!—
They were again together: you have done

And pen her up.

Cym. Nay, let her languish.

Die of this folly! [Exit.]

Enter PISANIO.
Queen. Fie,—you must give way:
Here is your servant.—How now, sir? What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.
Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.—

To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—
I would they were in Afric both together;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back.—Why came you from your master? [Ime]

Pis. On his command: he would not suffer
To bring him to the haven: left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When it pleased you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half hour hence,
I pray you, speak with me: you shall, at least,
Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A public Place.

Enter CLOTEN, and Two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: Where air comes out, air comes in: there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift
it—Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. No, faith; not so much as his patience. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. His steel was in debt; it went o'the backside the town. [Aside.]

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having;
gave you some ground.

2 Lord. As many inches as you have oceans:
Puppies! [Aside.]

Clo. I would, they had not come between us.

2 Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground. [Aside.]

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. [Aside.]

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber: 'Would there had been some hurt done!

3 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside.]

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. A Room in Cymbeline's Pa- lace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores
o'the haven,

And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost.

As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. 'Twas, His queen, his queen!
Imo. Then waved his handkerchief?

Pis. And kissed it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than
And that was all? [I!—]

Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief.

Still waving, as the fits and starts of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd

‡ Her beauty and sense are not equal.

To understand the force of this idea, it should be remembered that anciently almost every sign had a motto, or some attempt at a witticism underneath it.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
crack'd them, but
To look upon him; till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle;
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good
When shall we hear from him? [Pisano;
Pis. Be assured, madam,
With his next vantage*.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say; ere I could tell him,
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray [him,
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charged
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

To encounter me with orisons†, for then
I am in heaven for him: or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them
I will attend the queen. [despatch'd.—

Pis. Madam, I shall.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Rome. An Apartment in Philario's House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir: I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note‡, expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished§ than now he is, with that which makes || him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own,) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment:—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend¶ him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:—

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality.—
I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman;—whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone my countrymen and you; it had been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance†† of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunn'd to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbi-triment of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded‡‡ one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation,) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant qualified, and less attemptible, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend§§.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison,) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's out-prized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so, of your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier, to convince* the honour of my mistress; if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress: make her go back, even to the yielding; had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare, thereon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something: But I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused† in too bold a persuasion: and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A reprisal: Though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more: a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. 'Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation‡ of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: But, I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return:—Let there be covenants drawn between us: My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one:—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours:—provided I have your commendation § for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us:—only, thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain; lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve; I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

To give him welcome. [Exit PISANTIO.]

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health,
Iach. Well, madam. [Beseech you?]

Imo. Is he disposed to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant ; none a stranger there

So merry and so gamesome ; he is called
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here

He did incline to sadness ; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
A Gallian girl at home : he furnaces [loves]
The thick sighs from him ; whiles the jolly Briton [cries, O !]

(Your lord, I mean,) laughs from's free lungs,
Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—
who knows

By history, report, or his own proof,
What women is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish Assured bondage? [for]

Imo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam ; with his eyes in flood
It is a recreation to be by, [with laughter.]
And hear him mock the Frenchman : But,
heavens know,

Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he ; But yet heaven's bounty towards him night

Be used more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much [lents,—]

In you,—which I count his, beyond all ta
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?

You look on me ; What wreck discern you in Deserves your pity ? [me,]

Iach. Lamentable! What!
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I'the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy you!—But
It is an office of the gods to 'venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me ; 'Pray
you ;

*(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do : For certainties
Either are past remedies ; or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,) discover to me
What both you spur and stop !*

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon ; this hand, whose touch, [soul]

Whose every touch would force the feeler's
To the oath of loyalty ; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here : should I (damn'd then,) Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol ; join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood, as
With labour ;) then lie peeping in an eye,
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow ; it were fit,

* Making mouths.

Shy and foolish.

† What you seem anxious to utter, and yet withhold.

That all the plagues of hell should at one time
 Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
 Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
 Inclined to this intelligence, pronounce
 The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
 That, from my muteest conscience, to my Charms this report out. [tongue,

Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike
 my heart

With pity, that, doth make me sick. A lady,
 So fair, and fasten'd to an empery*, [partner'd
 Would make the great'st king double! to be
 With tomboyst, hired with that self-exhibition; [ventures,

Which your own coffers yield! with diseased
 That play with all infirmities for gold [stuff,
 Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd
 As well might poison poison! Be revenged;
 Or she, that bore you, was no queen, and you
 Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Revenged!
 How should I be revenged? If this be true,
 (As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse,) if it be true,
 How should I be revenged?

Iach. Should he make me
 Live like Diana's priest, betwix cold sheets;
 Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps, [it.
 In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge
 I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
 More noble than that runagate to your bed;
 And will continue fast to your affection,
 Still close, as sure.

Imo. What ho, Pisanio!
Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.
Imo. Away!—I do condemn mine ears, that have [able,

So long attended thee.—If thou wert honour-
 Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not [strange.

For such an end thou seek'st; as base as Thou wrongst a gentleman, who is as far
 From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains
 Thee and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisanio!—
 The king my father shall be made acquainted
 Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
 A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
 As in a Rounish stew, and to expound
 His beastly mind to us; he hath a court
 He little cares for, and a daughter whom
 He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio!—

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
 The credit, that thy lady hath of thee, [ness
 Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect good-
 Her assured credit!—Blessed live you long!
 A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
 Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.

I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
 Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
 That which he is, new o'er: And he is one
 The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
 That he enchants societies unto him:
 Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended
 He hath a kind of honour sets him off, [god:
 More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
 Most mighty princess, that I have adventured
 To try your taking of a false report; which hath [ment

Honour'd with confirmation your great judg-
 In the election of a sir so rare,

Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him [you,

Made me to fan^y you thus; but the gods made Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon, [court for yours.

Imo. All's well, sir: Take my power i'the

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot

To entreat your grace but in a small request,
 And yet of moment too, for it concerns
 Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
 Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't?

Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord, [stems,

(The best feather of our wing) have mingled
 To buy a present for the emperor;

Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
 In France: 'Tis plate, of rare device; and jewels,

Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
 And I am something curious, being strange||,
 To have them in safe stowage; May it please
 To take them in protection? [you

Imo. Willingly;

And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
 My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
 In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
 Attended by my men: I will make bold
 To send them to you, only for this night;
 I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my Bylength'ning my return. From Gallia [word,
 I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
 To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
 But not away to-morrow?

Iach. O, I must, madam:
 Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
 To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
 I have outstood my time; which is material
 To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
 Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
 And truly yielded you: You are very wel come. [Exeunt

ACT II.

SCENE I. Court before Cymbeline's Palace.Enter CLOTEN, and Two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck ! when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast *, to be hit away ! I had a hundred pound on't : And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing ; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that ? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have ran all out. [Aside.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths : Ha ?

2 Lord. No, my lord ; nor [Aside.] crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog !—I give him satisfaction : 'Would, he had been one of my rank !

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.

Clo. I am not more vexed at any thing in the earth,—A pox on't ! I had rather not be so noble as I am ; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother : every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2 Lord. You are a cock and capon too ; and you crow, cock, with your comb on. [Aside.

Clo. Sayest thou ?

1 Lord. It is not fit, your lordship should undertake every companion † that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that : but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night ?

Clo. A stranger ! and I know not on't !

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come ; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus ! a banished rascal ; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger ?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him ? Is there no derogation in't ?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate ‡, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted ; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate.

[Aside.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian : What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and first Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass ! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain ; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest ! Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd ; A mother hourly coining plots ; a wooer, More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he'd make ! The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour ; keep unshaked That temple, thy fair mind ; that thou may'st stand,

To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land ! [Exit.

SCENE II. A Bed-chamber ; in one Part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her Bed ; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there ? my woman Helen ?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it ?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then : mine eyes are weak :—

Fold down the leaf where I have left : To-bed : Take not away the taper, leave it burning ; And if thou canst awake by four o'clock, I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seized me wholly. [Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods !

From fairies, and the tempters of the night, Guard me, beseech ye !

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er labour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest : Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes § ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea, [lily ! How bravely thou becomest thy bed ! fresh And whiter than the sheets ! That I might touch !

And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast

Stronger than ever law could make: this secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock,

Why should I write this down, that's rivetted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late [down,]

Where Philomel gave up;—I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.

May bare the raven's eye: I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

SCENE III. An Ante-Chamber adjoining Imogen's Apartment.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship; You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning would put any man into courage: If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough: It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say, it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too:
if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

*Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate
And Phæbus' gins arise,* [sings,]
*His steeds to water at those springs
On chaliced flowers that lies;*

*And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With every thing that pretty bin:
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise.*

So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse hairs, and cats'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. [Exeunt Musicians.]

Enter CYMBELINE and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: He cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
Will she not forth? [daughter?]

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new;
She hath not yet forgot him: some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king;
Who let's go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter: Frame yourself
To orderly sollicit; and be friended
With aptness of the season: make denials
Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspired to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dismission tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from
The one is Caius Lincius. [Rome;]

Cym. A worthy fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: We must receive
According to the honour of his sender; [him
And towards himself his goodness forespent on us

We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the queen and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.]

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave ho!— [Knocks.]

I know her women are about her; What
If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and

Clo. A gentleman.

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more

Can justly boast of: What's your lordship's pleasure?

For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield,
being silent,

I would not speak. I pray you, spare me:

Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal*: and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,

By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity, [rather (To accuse myself) I hate you: which I had
You felt, than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch
(One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes, [none:
With scraps o'the court,) it is no contract.
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, (Yet who, than he, more mean?) to knit their souls

(On whom there is no more dependency

Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by

The consequence o'the crown: and must not

The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding ‡ for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styled
The under-hauman of his kingdom; and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo.

The south-fog rot him!

than come [ment,
To be but named of thee. His meanest gar-
That ever hath but clipp'd his body is dearer
In my respect, than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now,

Clo. You have abused me:—

(Statist* though I am none, nor like to be,)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our, not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar

That mend upon the world.

To make your vessel nimble.

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that Must not continue friends. [we

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring: and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post.

If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours; if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach.

Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength

I will confirm with oath; which I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall (Where, I confess, I slept not; but, profess, Had that was well worth watching,) It was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver: the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I won—
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought, [er'd
Since the true life on't was——

Post.

This is true,
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Iach.

More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post.

So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach.

The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,

Chaste Dian bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post.

This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach.

The roof o'the chamber
With golden cherubims is fretted: her andirons†

(I had forgot them,) were two winking cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands§.

Post.

This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this, (and praise

Be given to your remembrance,) the descrip-
Of what is in her chamber; nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Be pale; I beg but leave to air this jewel:

See!—

And now 'tis up again: it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you; doth she?

Post. O no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the Ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't.—Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love, [women
Where there's another man. The vows of
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues; which is no-
O, above measure false! thing;

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again: 'tis not yet won;
It may be probable she lost it; or,
Who knows if one of her women, being cor-
Hath stolen it from her. [rupted,

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by't;—Back my ring;
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter, he swears. [sure,
'Tis true;—nay, keep the ring—'tis true: I am
She would not lose it: her attendants are All sworn and honourable:—They induced to steal it!

And by a stranger?—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance* of her incontinency [dearly.
Is this—she hath bought the name of whore thus
There, take thy hire: and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be believed
Of one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on't;
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast
(Worthy the pressing) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging. By my life,
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count (Once, and a million! [the turns;

Iach. I'll be sworn,—

Post.

No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou hast made me a cuckold.

Iach.

I will deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!

I will go there, and do't; i'the court; before
Her father:—I'll do something— [Exit.

Phi.

Quite besides
The government of patience!—You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach.

With all my heart.
[Exit.

SCENE V. The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women

Must be half-workers? We are bastards all;
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time; so doth my wife [geancel
The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, ven-
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me, oft, forbearance: did it with
A pudency† so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her [devils!—

As chaste as unsunned snow.—O, all the
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not?
Or less,—at first: Perchance he spoke not; but,
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cry'd, oh! and mounted: found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm

It is the woman's part: Be it lying, note it
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longings, slanders, mutability, [knows,
All faults that may be named, nay that hell
Why, hers, in part, or all; but, rather, all:
For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them:—yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

*Enter CYMBELINE, Queen, CLOTEN, and Lords, at one Door; and at another, CAIUS
LUCIUS, and Attendants. [with us?
Cym.* Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar

Luc. When Julius Cæsar (whose remembrance yet [tongues,

Lives in men's eyes; and will to ears and
Be thence and hearing ever,) was in this Bri-
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, [tain (Famous in Cæsar's praises, &c. whit less

* The badge, the token.

† Modesty.

Than in his feats deserving it,) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee
Is left untender'd. [lately

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cæsars
Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from us, to resume

We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors; together with
The natural bravery of yourisle; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies'
boats, [conquest

But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of Cæsar made here; but made not here his brag
Of, came, and saw, and overcame: with shame
The first that ever touch'd him,) he was carried [ping,

From off our coast, twice beaten: and his ship-
[Poor ignorant baubles!] on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells moved upon their surges,
crack'd

As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof,
The famed Cassibelan, who was once at point
(O giglot* fortune!) to master Cæsar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come there's no more tribute to be paid:
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars: other of them may have crooked uses; but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say I am one;
but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
this tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar's ambition, [stretch

(Which swell'd so much, that it did almost
The sides of the world,) against all colour, here
Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar, Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of Cæsar [franchise,

Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmutius,
Who was the first of Britain which did put
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar (Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy: [sion
Receive it from me, then:—War and confu-
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
For fury not to be resisted:—Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance†; I am perfect‡,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their liberties, are now in arms: a precedent
Which, not to read, would show the Britons
So Cæsar shall not find them. [cold:

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two longer: If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you;
and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir. [mine:]

Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he
All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Another Room in the same.

Enter PISANIO.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not

What monster's her accuser?—Leonatus!
O, master! what a strange infection
Is fallen into thy ear? What false Italian [vail'd
(As poisonous tongued as handed) hath pre-
On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No:
She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in § some virtue.—O, my master
Thy mind to her is now as low, as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her!
Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I
Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her
If it be so to do good service, never [blood?]
Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity,
So much as this fact comes to? Do't: The letter [Reading.

That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity:—O damn'd paper! [bauble

Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless
Art thou a feodary || for this act, and lock'st
So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord
Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord? Leo
O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer, [natus
That knew the stars as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,

* Strumpet.

† At the extremity of defiance.

‡ Well-informed.

§ To take in a town is to conquer it.

|| Condescend.

Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him,— (Some griefs are med'cinable;) that is one of
For it doth physic love;—of his content, (them,
All but in that!—Good wax; thy leave:—

Bless'd be, [Lovers,
You bees, that make these locks of counsel!
And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables.—Good news, gods! [Reads.

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven. What your own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love,

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.

O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou,
Pisano?

He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither: If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisano, (Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,— [long'st,—

O, let me 'bate,—but not like me:—yet
But in a fainter kind:—O, not like me;
For mine's beyond beyond,) say, and speak thick*, [ing,

(Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hear-
To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: And, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
To inherit such a haven: But, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap [going,

That we shall make in time, from our hence-
And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get
hence:

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution, man, [wagers,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
Where horses have been nimble than the sands
That run i' the clock's behalf:—But this is foolery:—

Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father: and provide me, presently,

A riding suit; no costlier than would fit
A franklin's† housewife.

Pis. Madam, your best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor there,

Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee;

Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Wales. A mountainous
Country, with a Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVI
RAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such [gate
Whose roofs as low as ours! Stoop, boys: This Instructs you how to adore the heavens; and bows you

To morning's holy office: The gates of monarchy
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbands on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!

We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now, for our mountain sport: Up to yon hill, [sider,

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Con-
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens, and sets off.
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see:
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check;
Richer, than doing nothing for a babe;
Prouder, than rusting in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes them fine
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours||

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledged, [know not

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor
What air's from home. Haply, this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you, [ing
That have a sharper known; well correspond-
With your stiff age; but, unto us, it is
A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit¶

Arv. What should we speak of,
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:

We are beastly; subtle as the fox, for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf, for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak
Did you but know the city's nauries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb

Crowd one word on another, as fast as possible. + A freeholder. † Strut, walk proudly ‡ Scaly-winged. § i. e., Compared with ours. ¶ To overpass his bound.

Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling; the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies
i' the search;

And bath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure:—O, boys, this story

The world may read in me: My body's mark'd
With Roman swords: and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline loved me;

And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: Then was I as a tree,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but in one
night,

A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my
And left me bare to weather. [leaves,

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft,) [vail'd

But that two villains, whose false oaths pre-
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so, [years,
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty
This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world:

Where I have lived at honest freedom; paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all [tains;
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the moun-
This is not hunters' language:—He, that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;

And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys. [Exeunt Gui. and Arv.

How hard it is, to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons of the
king;

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine: and, though train'd up thus meanly [do hit

I' the cave, wherein they bow, their thoughts
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things to prunice it, much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!

When on thy three foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story: say,—Thus mine enemy fell;
And thus I set my foot on his neck; even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves, and puts him-self in posture [Cadwal,

That acts my words. The younger brother,
(Once, Arvirágus,) in as like a figure, [more Strikes life into my speech, and shows much His own conceiving. Hark! the game is roused!— [knows,

O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience
Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three, and two years old, I stole these babes;

Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rest'st me of my lands. Enurphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,

And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up.
[Exit.

SCENE IV. Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me when we came from horse, the place [so
Was near at hand:—Ne'er long'd my mother
To see me first, as I have now:—Pisanio! man!
Where is Posthūmus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh [thus,

From the inward of thee? One, but painted
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself
Into a haviour* of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to't before; if wintery, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!

That drug-damp'd Italy hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man;
thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] *Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whercof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunities at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art
the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.*

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword?
the paper

Hath cut her throat already.—No, 'tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue [breath

Out-venoms all the worms of Nile; whose Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maids, matrons, nays, the secrets of the grave,
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer,
madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature,

* For behaviour.

To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed?
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady! [Iachimo,

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency; [thinks,
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, me-
Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay* of Italy, Whose mother was her painting†, hath betray'd him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O,
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villany; not born, where't grows;
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false
Æneas, [weeping

Were, in his time, thought false: and Sinon's
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Post-
Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men; [hūmus,
Goodly and gallant, shall be false and perjured,
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest: [him,

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou see'st
A little witness my obedience: Look!

I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding; strike.
Thou may'st be valliant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;

And if I do not by thy hand, thou art [laughter
No servant of thy master's: Against self-
There's a prohibition so divine, [my heart;
That cravens‡ my weak hand. Come, here's Something's afore't: Soft, soft; we'll no defence;
Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?

The scriptures§ of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! 'Thus may poor fools [betray'd

Believe false teachers: Though those that are
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthūmus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but

A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disedged by her
That now thou tirest|| on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, despatch: [knife?

The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I received command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then?

Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abused
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?

The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent? whereunto I never-
Purpose return?—Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which
I have consider'd of a course: Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abused:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtezan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bide? How
Or in my life what comfort, When I am [live?
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—

Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing:
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night, [volume
Are they not but in Britain? 'P the world's
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: Pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be

But by self-danger; you should tread a course Pretty, and full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus: so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and niceness
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly, Woman its pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrellous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan*; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,
'Tis in my cloak-bag, doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: Would you, in their serv-

With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable, [abroad

And, doubling that, most holy. Your means
You have met, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Then art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: This attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short

What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-quail'd at land, a dram of this

And fit you to your manhood:—May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee.

SCENE V. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.
Enter CYMBELINE, Queen, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far: and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence;
And am right sorry, that I must report ye

My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that
The due of honour in no point omit:— [office;
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time
I wear it as your enemy. [forth

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner: Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords.

Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!
[Exeunt LUCIUS, and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it ho-
That we have given him cause. [nours us,
Clo. 'Tis all the better;

Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor

How it goes here. It fits us, therefore, ripely,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he
His war for Britain. [moves

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus,
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: She looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty:
We have noted it.—Call her before us; for
We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an Attendant.
Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retired
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. 'Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.
Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer [make.
That will be given to the loud'st of noise we

her,

She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer: this
She wish'd me to make known; but our great
Made me to blame in memory. [court

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old
I have not seen these two days. [servant,
Queen. Go, look after.—

[Exit CLOTEN.]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!—
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence
Proceed by swallowing that; for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her, [her;
Where is she gone? Haply despair hath seized
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desired Posthumus: Gone she is
To death, or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: She being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son?

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled:
Go in, and cheer the king; he rages; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: May
This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit Queen.]

Clo. I love and hate her: for she's fair and royal; [site

And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman*; from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all: I love her, therefore: But,
Disdaining me, and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment,
That what's else rare, is choked; and in that point,

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be revenged upon her. For when fools

Enter PISANIO.

Shall—Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah? [lain,

Come hither: Ah, you precious pander! Villain—
Where is thy lady?—In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness can
A dram of worth be drawn. [not

Pis. Alas, my lord,

How can she be with him? When was she
He is in Rome. [miss'd?

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No further halting: satisfy me home,
What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word,—No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,

This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a Letter.]

Clo. Let's see't:—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish. }
She's far enough; and what he learns }

May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humph!

Pis. I'll write to my lord she's dead. O

Imogen,

Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again!

[Aside.]

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.— Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly,—I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon;
—Even there, thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would these garments were come.
She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart,) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her:
First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,
—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber

* Than any lady, than all ladies, than all womankind.

that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou shalt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford; 'Would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true to thee,

Were to prove false, which I will never be, To him that is most true.—To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow, [speed] You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed! [Exit.]

SCENE VI. Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter IMOGEN, in Boy's Clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one: I have tired myself; and for two nights together [sick] Have made the ground my bed. I should be But that my resolution helps me.—Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee, Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think, Foundations fly the wretched: such, I mean, Where they should be relieved. Two beggars told me,

I could not miss my way: Will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them; knowing 'tis A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in fulness

Is sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars.—My dear lord! [on thee]

Thou art one o'the false ones: Now I think My hunger's gone; but even before, I was At point to sink for food.—But what is this? Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold: I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine,

Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. Plenty, and peace, breeds cowards; hardness ever

Of hardness is mother.—Ho! who's here? If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage, Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then I'll enter.

Beat draw my sword; and if mine enemy But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look Such a foe, good heavens! [on't.]

[She goes into the Cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have proved best woodman*, and Are master of the feast: Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match†:

The sweet of industry would dry, and die, But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs [ness]

Will make what's homely, savoury: Wear! Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth

Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be Poor house, that keep'st thyself! [here,]

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite. [browze on that,]

Gui. There is cold meat i'the cave; we'll Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Stay; come not in: [Looking in.]

But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon! Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not: Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: Good troth, [I had found] I have stolen nought; nor would not, though Gold strew'd o'the floor. Here's money for my meat:

I would have left it on the board, so soon As I had made my meal; and parted With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt! As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you are angry: Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven, sir.

Bel. What is your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir: I have a kinsman, who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford; To whom being going, almost spent with hunger, I am fallen in† this offence. [ger,]

Bel. Prythee, fair youth, Think us no churls; nor measure our good minds [ter'd!]

Gui. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard, but be your groom.—In I bid for you, as I'd buy. [honesty,]

Arv. I'll make't my comfort, He is a man; I'll love him as my brother:—And such a welcome as I'd give to him, After long absence, such as yours:—Most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends

If brothers?—'Would it had been so, that they [my prize] Had been my father's sons! then had Been less; and so more equal ballast—To thee, Posthumus. [ing] Aside.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. 'Would, I could free't!

Arv. Or I; whate'er it be, What pain it cost, what danger! Gode!

* Best hunter.

† Agreement.

‡ In, for into.

*Bel.*Hark, boys.
[Whispering.]

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by

Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus' false.

Bel. It shall be so:

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth,
come in:

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supt'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,

So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to the

Imo. Thanks, sir. [lark, less welcome.

Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ;

That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians;

And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against

The fallen off Britons; that we do incite

The gentry to this business: He creates

Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,

For this immediate levy, he commands

His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay,

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy

Must be suppliant: The words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers, and the time

Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly.
How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer; in his own chamber, I mean,) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his;
no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions; yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father: who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations.
My horse is tied up safe: Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDE-
RIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. You are not well: [To IMOGEN.] remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. Brother, stay here: [To IMOGEN.]
Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;

But clay and clay differs in dignity,

Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not;—yet I am not well:

But not so citizen a wanton, as [me]

To seem to die, ere sick: So please you leave

Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom [me]

Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by

Cannot amend me: Society is no comfort

To one not sociable: I'm not very sick,

Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me
here:

I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,

Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it:

How much the quantity, the weight as much,

As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me

In my good brother's fault: I know not why

I love this youth; and I have heard you say,

Love's reason's without reason; the bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say,

My father, not his youth.

Bel. O noble strain! [Aside]

O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!

Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base. [Grace.]

Nature hath meal, and bran; contempt, and

I am not their father; yet who this should be,

Doth miracle itself, lover before me.—

'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.

* Unsteady.

† i. e., Because.

‡ In single combat.

§ Keep your daily course.

Arv. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health.—So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage but at court: Experience, O, thou disprove'st report! [dish, The imperious* seas breed monsters; for the Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still; heart-sick:—Pisanio,

I'll not taste of thy drug.

Gui. I could not stir him;

He said, he was gentle†, but unfortunate;

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. [after

Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, here, I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field:— We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,

For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well, or ill,

I am bound to you.

Bel. And so shalt be ever. [Exit IMOGEN. This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears, he hath Good ancestors. [had

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots in characters;

And sauced our broths, as Juno had been sick, And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes

A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh

Was that it was, for not being such a smile;

The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly

From so divine a temple, to commix

With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note,

That grief and patience, rooted in him both,

Mingle their spurs‡ together.

Arv. Grow, patience;

And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine

His perishing root, with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come; away.—

Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that vil-
Hath mock'd me;—I am faint. [lain

Bel. Those runagates!

Means he not as? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o'the queen. I fear some ambush.

I saw him not these many years, and yet

I know 'tis he:—We are held as outlaws:—

Hence.

Gui. He is but one: You and my brother

What companies are near: pray you, away;

Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Clo. Soft! What are you

That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?

I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing

More slavish did I ne'er, than answering

A slave, without a knock.

Imperial. † Well-born.

Clo.

Thou art a robber,

A law-breaker, a villain: Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou

Have not I

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?

Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not

My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art;

Why I should yield to thee?

Clo.

Thou villain base,

Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui.

No, nor thy tailor, rascal,

Who is thy grandfather; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo.

Thou precious varlet

My tailor made them not.

Gui.

Hence then, and thank

The man that gave them thee. Thou art some

Thou injurious thief,

Gui.

What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name, [spider

I cannot tremble at it; were't toad, or adder

'Twould move me sooner.

Clo.

To thy further fear,

Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know

I'm son to the queen.

Gui.

I'm sorry for't; not seeming

So worthy as thy birth.

Clo.

Ait not afraid? [the wise:

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear;

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo.

Die the death:

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,

I'll follow those that even now fled hence,

And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:

Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No company's abroad. [him, sure.

Arv. None in the world: You did mistake

Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him, [favour

But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of

Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,

And burst of speaking, were as his: I am ab-

In this place we left them;

I wish my brother make good time with him,

You say he is so fell.

Bel.

Being scarce made up,

I mean, to man, he had not apprehension

Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgment

Is oft the cause of fear: But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN's Head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,

There was no money in't: not Hercules

Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:

Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne

My head, as I do his.

Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul

Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Though his humour

Was nothing but mutation†; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have raved,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,

(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in: yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!

I'll willingly to him: To gain¶ his colour,

I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head: and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rudest wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder-derful,

That an invisible instinct should frame them—
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn Music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion

Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys,
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMOGEN as dead, in his Arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for!

Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!

My brother wears thee not the one half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish care††

thing? [made; but I,

Jove knows what man thou might'st have
Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy!
How found you him?

Arv. Starkit, as you see:

Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right
Reposing on a cushion. [check

Gui. Where?

Arv. O the floor;
His arms thus leagued: I thought, he slept;

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt not lack
The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose;
nor

The azure hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor

And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious: Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave.

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground, [words,
As once our mother; use like note, and
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee;

For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less:
for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys:
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid § for that: Though mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust; yet reverence,
(That angel of the world,) doth make distinc-

And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him.
We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin.
[Exit BELARIUS.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arv. So,—begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o'the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and t'wen thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o'the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. Fear not slander, censure|| rash;
Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign ¶ to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!
Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!

Arv. Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the Body of CLOTEN.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: Come lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers, but about midnight, more: [night,

You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so

again;

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exit BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford Haven; Which is the way?—

I thank you.—By yon bush?—Pray, how far thither?

And left this head on.—How should this be?

Enter LUCIUS, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea: attending
You here at Milford Haven, with your ships:
They are here in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confusers,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers [sir,
Beinster'd; bid the captains look to't.—Now,
What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision: [Thus:—
(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence,)
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,

There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,

(Unless my sins abuse my divination,)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here, [time

It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather:
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—
Young one,

Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded: Who is this,
Thou makest thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest

In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it
What art thou?

Nothing to be were better. This was my mas-

There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,

SCENE III. A Room in Cymbeline's
Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, and PISANIO.

Cym. Again; and bring me word, how 'tis with her.

A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger:—

Heavens, [Imogen,
How deeply you at once do touch me!
The great part of my comfort, gone: my queen
Upon a desperate bed; and in a time
When fearful was point at me; her son gone,
Somedevil for this present: It strikes me past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But, for my
mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. 'Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good, my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally.

For Cloten,—
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time's troublesome:
We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
[To PISANIO.]

Does yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast; with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and I am amazed with matter*. [queen!]

1 Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront † no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready: [motion]

The want is, but to put those powers ‡ in
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: Let's withdraw:
And meet the time, as it seeks us. We fear
What can from Italy annoy us; but [not
We grieve at chances here.—Away. [Exeunt.]

Pis. I heard no letter from my master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slain: 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work:

Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my coun-

them.

All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Before the Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to
From action and adventure? [lock it]

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts ||
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going; newness Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not muster'd

Among the bands) may drive us to a render ¶
Where we have lived; and so extort from us
That which we've done, whose answer would Drawn on with torture. [be death]

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt,
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserved my service, nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promised,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines
I'll thither: What thing is it, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and ve-nuison?

Never bestrid a horse, save one, that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel? I am ashamed
To look upon the holy sun, to have

Gui. By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I; Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since on your lives you set

So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys:

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead.—The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn, [Aside.

Till it fly out, and show them princes born. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I. A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter POSTHUMUS with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee;
for I wish'd [ones,
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married
If each of you would take this course, how many [selves,
Must murder wives much better than them-
For wrying* but a little?—O, Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods, if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had lived to put on † this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me wretch more worth your vengeance. But,
alack, [love,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse;
And make them dread it to the doer's thrift.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight [hither
Against my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress;
peace! [heavens,

I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o'the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o'the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without and more within.

[Exit.

SCENE II. The same.

Enter, at one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army.—LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following it like a poor Soldier. They march over, and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth and dis-armeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom

Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Revenagingly enfeebles me; or could this carl †,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdued me,
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn,
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.

BELINE is taken: then enter to his rescue,
BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.*

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;

The lane is guarded: nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.

Gui. Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

*Enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons.
They rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt.
Then, enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.* [thyself:

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hood-wink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-enforce or fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord. Camest thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did:

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought: The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserved
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country;—athwart the

He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run

Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men!
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards:
Stand;

Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and

But to look back in frown: stand, stand.—

The rest do nothing,) with this word, stand,

A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith they fly

A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made—

Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:

*Two boys, an old man, twice a boy, a lane,
Preserved the Britons, was the Roman's*

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir. [bane.

Post. 'Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell, you are angry.

[Exit.

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery!

To be i'the field, and ask, what news of me!
To-day, how many would have given their honours

To have saved their carcasses? took heel to do't,
And yet died too? I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death, where I did hear him
groan; [monster,

Nor feel him, where he struck: Being an ugly
'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives i'the war.—Well, I will find him:

For being now a favourer to the Roman,
No more a Briton, I have resumed again
The part I came in: Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take; For me, my ransom's
death;

On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter Two British Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken: [angels.

What crows have peck'd them here. He brags

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUILDERUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. The Captains present
POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV. A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and Two Gaolers.

1 Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;

So, graze, as you find pasture.

2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.

Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:

Though light, take pieces for the figure sake:

And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

SICILIUS LEONATUS, Father to POSTHU-MUS, an old Man, attired like a Warrior;
leading in his Hand an ancient Matron,
his Wife, and Mother to POSTHUMUS, with Music before them. Then, after other Music, follow the Two Young Leo-nati, Brothers to POSTHUMUS, with Wounds, as they died in the Wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries

Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?

I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law.

Whose father then (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art,)

Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

But took me in my throes;

Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserved the praise o'the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain, where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruit'ful object be

In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity
Moth. With marriage wherefore was he
To be exiled and thrown [mock'd,
From Leonati's seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck? and scorn
O' the other's villany?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
Our parents, and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenantius' right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:

Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd

The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours torn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise,

Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion
Or we poor ghosts will cry [help!

To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle; he throws a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Offend our hearing; hush!—How dare you ghosts,

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?

Poor shadows of Elysium, hence: and rest
Upon your never withering banks of flowers:

Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd;
No care of yours it is, you know, 'tis ours.

Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;

Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.

Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married.—Rise, and

He shall be lord of lady Imogen, [fade!—
And happier much by his affliction made.

This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;

And so, away: no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—

Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath

* Fetters.

† This Scene is supposed not to be Shakspeare's, but feisted in by the Players for mere show.

‡ The fool.

Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is [bird
More sweet than our bless'd fields: his royal
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his beak,
As when his god is pleased.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd

His radiant roof:—Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

[Ghosts vanish.]

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot

A father to me: and thou hast created

A mother and two brothers: But (O scorn!)

Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born.

And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that de-
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve;
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I, [why.
That have this golden chance, and know not What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself known, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing:
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather: ready long ago.

Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir: But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink;
sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O the charity of a penny cord!
it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no due debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge:—Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ach: But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed,
I think, he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed, do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head then:
I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know; or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know; or jump*
the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going,
but such as wink, and will not use them.

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news;—I am called to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaole no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and Messenger]

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone†. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation on gaolers, and gallowses? I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDE-RIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made

Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart,
That the poor soldier, that so richly fought,
Whose rags shamed gilded arms, whose naked breast

Stepp'd before target of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promised
But beggary and poor looks. [nought

Cym. No tidings of him

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead
But no trace of him. [and living

* Hazard.

† Forward.

‡ Target, shield.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward: which I will add
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
[To BELAR., GUID., and ARVIR.
By whom, I grant, she lives; 'Tis now the
To ask of whence you are:—report it. [time
Bel. Sir,

In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast, were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Arise, my knights o'the battle: I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.
There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
And not o'the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confessed,
I will report, so please you: These her women
Can trip me, if I err: who, with wet cheeks,
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pry'thee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never loved you; only

Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand
With such integrity, she did confess [to love
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her slight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess,
she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and, ling'r-
ing, [posed,

By inches waste you: In which time, she pur-
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show: yes, and in time, [work

(When she had fitted you with her craft,) to
Her son into the adoption of the crown.
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
Ladg. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart, [been vicious,
That thought her like her seeming; it had
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. He! 'ten mend all Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded;
POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that
The Britons have razed out, though with the loss [made suit,

Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have
That their good souls may be appeased with slaughter [granted;

Of you their captives, which ourself have
So, think of your estate. [day

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd [gods

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: suffice it,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:

Augustus lives to think on't: And so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; My boy, a Briton born,

Let him be ransomed: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,

So feat*, so nurse-like: let his virtue join
With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness

Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have served a Roman: save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour † is familiar to me.—

Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why, nor wherefore, [live:

To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master;
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good
And yet, I know, thou wilt. [lad;

Imo. No, no: alack,
There's other work in hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: Briefly die their joys, [boys,
That place them on the truth of girls and
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more; think more and more [on? speak,

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman: no more kin to me,

* Ready, dexterous.

† Countenance.

than I to your highness; who, being born
Am something nearer. [your vassal,

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art, my good youth, my page;
I'll bethy master: Walk with me; speak freely.

CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy revived from death?

Arv. One saud another
Not more resembles: That sweet rosy lad,
Who died, and was Fidele:—What think you?
Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;

Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. It is my mistress: [Aside.

Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.]

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To IACH.] step
yon forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely:
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On,
speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may
Of whom he had this ring, [render

Post. What's that to him? [Aside.

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee. [that

Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which

Forments me to conceal. By villany
I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel:

Whom thou didst banish; and (which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me,) a nobler sir ne'er lived
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,

Cym. All that belongs to this. [my lord?

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits

Quail* to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength:

[will,
I had rather thou shouldst live while nature
Than die ere I hear more: strive man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!) it was in Rome, (accursed
The mansion where!) 'twas at a feast, (O
'would

Our viands had been poison'd! or, at least,
Those which I heaved to head!) the good
Posthūmus,

(What should I say? he was too good, to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all Amongst the rarest of good ones,) sitting sadly
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for feature,

laming [nerve,
The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Mi-
Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man Loves woman for; besides, that hook of wiving,

Fairness which strikes the eye:—

Cym. I stand on fire:
Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly.—This
Posthūmus

(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover,) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom he praised, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,

And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his descrip-
Proved us unspeaking sots. [tion

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.

He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: Whereat, I, wretch!
Made scruple of his praise; and wagger'd with him

Pieces of gold 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain [ring
In suit the place of his bed, and win this
By hers and mine adultery: he, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;

And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phœbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design: Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your duiler Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her brace let,

(O, cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,— Methinks, I see him now, —

Sink into dejection.

*Post.*Ay, so thou dost, [Coming forward.

Italian fiend!—Ah me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious; it is I
That all the abhorred things of the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthúmus,
That kill'd thy daughter:—villain-like, I lie;
That caused a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't:—the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself*.
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthúmus Leonatus; and
Be villany less than 'twas!—O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her, she falls.

Pis. O, gentlemen, help, help [mus!
Mine, and your mistress:—O, my lord Posthúmus ye ne'er kill'd Imogen till now:—Help, Mine honour'd lady! [help!—

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress?

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to
To death with mortal joy. [strike me

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight; [hence!
Thou gavest me poison: dangerous fellow,
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing; I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O Gods!—

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: If Pisanio
Have said she, given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is served
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importuned me
To temper† poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en would cease
The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again

Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.

Gul. This is sure, Fidele. [from you?

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady

Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child?
What, makest thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir.
[Kneeling.

Bel. Though you did love this youth,
You had a motive for't. [blame ye not;

[To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Cym. My tears that fall
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord

Cym. O, she was naught; and 'long of her
was,

That we meet here so strangely: But her soul
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord
Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lo, d
Upon my lady's missing, came to me [Cloten,
With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth,
and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death: By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he inforced from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to vio-
My lady's honour: what became of him, [late
I further know not.

Gul. Let me end the story:

I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forfend! I
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips

Pluck a hard sentence: pry'thee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gul. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince. [did me

Gul. A most uncivil one: The wrongs he Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me [scd,

With language that would make me spurn the
If it could roar so to me: I cut off's head;
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and Endure our law: Thou art dead. [must

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king:
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone;

* Not only the temple of virtue, but virtue herself. † Mix, compound, ‡ Forbid.

Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arr. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three:

But I will prove, that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arr. Your danger is Ours.

Gut. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it, then.—
By leave;—Thou hadst, great king, a subject,
Was call'd Belarius. [who

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath Assumed this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have received it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy: Here's my Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons; [knee;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old

Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,

Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp;
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoiced deliverance more:—Bless'd may you be,

That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

And she, like harmless lightning, throws her
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange

And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother; So we'll hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my father too; and did re-
To see this gracious season. [lieve me,

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought, [graced
He would have well becom'd this place, and
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd;—That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo; I had you down, and might Have made you finish.

Iach. I am down again :
[Kneeling.
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, 'beseech
you,
Which I so often owe : but, your ring first ;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me ;
The power that I have on you, is to spare you ;
The malice towards you, to forgive you : Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd :
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law ;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, sir.
As you did mean indeed to be our brother ;
Joy'd are we, that you are. [lord of Rome,

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my
Call forth your soothsayer : As I slept, me-
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back, [thought,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows *
Of mine own kindred : when I waked, I found
This label on my bosom ; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it ; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus, —
Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.
Sooth. [Reads.] *When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.
Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp ;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,*

Being Leo-natus, doth import so much :
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter [To CYMBELINE.

Which we call mollis aër ; and mollis aër
We term it mulier : which mulier I divine,
Is this most constant wife : who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee : and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth : who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now revived,
To the majestic cedar join'd ; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin :—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire ; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen ;
Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her and Have laid most heavy hand. [hers.)

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do
The harmony of this peace. The vision [tune
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd : For the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o'the sun
So vanish'd : which foreshow'd our princely
The imperial Cæsar, should again unite [eagle,
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods ;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars ! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward : Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together : so through Lud's town
And in the temple of great Jupiter [march:
Our peace we'll ratify ; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there :—Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt.

† Embraced.

This play has many just sentiments, some natural dialogues, and some pleasing scenes, but they are obtained at the expense of much incongruity. To remark the folly of the fiction, the absurdity of the conduct, the confusion of the names, and manners of different times, and the impossibility of the events in any system of life, were to waste criticism upon un-resisting imbecility, upon faults too evident for detection, and too gross for aggravation.—

ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing: the Tribunes and Senators aloft, as in the Senate. Enter, below, SATURNINUS and his Followers, on one side; and BASSIANUS and his Followers, on the other; with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
 Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
 And, countrymen, my loving followers,
 Plead my successive title* with your swords:
 I am his first-born son, that was the last
 That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
 Then let my father's honours live in me,
 Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right,—

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
 Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
 Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
 And suffer not dishonour to approach
 The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
 To justice, continence, and nobility:
 But let desert in pure election shine;
 And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS aloft, with the Crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends
 Ambitiously for rule and empery,— Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand
 A special party, have, by their common voice,
 In election for the Roman empery,

Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,
 For many good and great deserts to Rome;
 A nobler man, a braver warrior,
 Lives not this day within the city walls:
 He by the senate is accited † home,
 From weary wars against the barbarous Goths
 That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
 Hath yoked a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
 Ten years are spent since first he undertook
 This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
 Our enemies' pride. Five times he hath re-turn'd

 Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
 In coffins from the field;
 And now, at last, laden with honour's spoils,
 Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
 Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
 Let us entreat,—By honour of his name,
 Whom, worthily, you would have now succeed,
 And in the Capitol and senate's right,
 Whom you pretend to honour and adore,—
 That you withdraw you, and abate your
 strength;
 Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
 Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
 In thy uprightness and integrity,
 And so I love and honour thee and thine,
 Thy nobler brother Titus, and his sons, [all
 And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled
 Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
 That I will here dismiss my loving friends;
 And to my fortunes, and the people's favour,

* i e., My title to the succession.

† Summoned.

Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of BASSIANUS.

Sat. Friends that have been thus forward in my right,

I thank you all, and here dismiss you all;

And to the love and favour of my country

Commit myself, my person, and the cause,

[Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,

As I am confident and kind to thee.—

Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes! and me, a poor competitor.

[SAT. and BAS. go into the Capitol, and exeunt with Senators, MARCUS, &c.

SCENE II. The same.

Enter a Captain, and Others.

Cap. Romans, make way; the good Andronicus,

Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,

Successful in the battles that he fights,

With honour and with fortune is return'd,

From where he circumscribed with his sword,

And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Flourish of Trumpets, &c., enter MUTIUS

and MARTIUS: after them, two Men bearing a Coffin covered with black;

then QUINTUS and LUCIUS. After them,

TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA,

with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS,

AARON, and other Goths, prisoners;

Soldiers and People, following. The

Bearers set down the Coffin, and TITUS speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!

Lo, as the bark that hath discharged her Returns with precious lading to the bay,

From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,

Come th' Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs, To re-solute his country with his tears;

Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—

Thou great defender of this Capitol†, Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!—

Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,

Half of the number that king Priam had,

Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!

These, that survive, let Rome reward with love;

These, that I bring unto their latest home,

With burial amongst their ancestors:

Here Goths have given me leave to sheath my sword.

Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,

Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,

To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?—

Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The Tomb is opened.

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,

And sleep in peace, slain in your country's

O sacred receptacle of my joys, [wails]

Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,

How many sons of mine hast thou in store,

That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,

That we may hew his limbs, and, on a pile,

Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh;

Before this earthly prison of their bones;

That so the shadows be not unappeased,

Nor we disturbed with prodigies on earth‡.

Tit. I give him you; the noblest that survives,

The eldest son of this distressed queen

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,

A mother's tears in passion § for her son:

And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,

O, think my son to be as dear to me.

Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,

To beautify thy triumphs, and return,

Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;

But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,

For valiant doings in their country's cause?

O! if to fight for king and common weal

Were piety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:

Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods

Draw near them then in being merciful:

Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge;

Thrice noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me. [beheld]

These are their brethren, whom you Goths

Religiously they ask a sacrifice:

To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,

To appease their groaning shadows that are gone. [straight;

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,

Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consumed.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with ALARBUS.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their Swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,

And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons; Rome's readiest champions, repose you here, Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells, Here grow no damned grudges; here, are no storms,

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter LAVINIA.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!

Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears

I render, for my brethren's obsequies;

And at thy feet I kneel with tears of joy

Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome:

O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,

Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserved

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!—

Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise*!

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Others.

Mar. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars, You that survive, and you that sleep in fame.

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,

That in your country's service drew your swords:

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,

That hath aspired to Solon's happiness†,

And triumphs over chance, in honour's bed.—

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,

Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,

Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,

This palliament‡ of white and spotless hue;

And name thee in election for the empire,

With these our late-deceased emperor's sons

Be candidatus then, and put it on.

And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits

Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness:

What! should I don§ this robe, and trouble

Be chosen with proclamations to-day; [you†

To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,

And set abroad new business for you all?

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,

And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,

Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,

In right and service of their noble country:

Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to control the world:

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery. [thou tell?—

The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son, Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,

To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,

And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:

And, for an onset, Titus, to advance

Thy name, and honourable family,

That I would choose, were I to choose anew.

Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,

power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize

My true-betrothed love, and now my wife?
But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Mean while I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir: You are very short with us;

But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.
Only thus much I give your grace to know,

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,

Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you, and highly moved to wrath

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him then to favour, Saturnine;

That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,
A father and a friend, to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds;

'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me:
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge

How I have loved and honour'd Saturnine!
Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What! madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; The gods of Rome

I should be author to dishonour you!
But, on mine honour, dare I undertake

For good lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs:

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—
My lord, be ruled by me, be won at last, [tents:

Dissemble all your griefs and discon-
You are but newly planted in your throne; [too,

Lest then the people, and patricians
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant us for ingratitude,
(Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,) [alone: Aside

Yield at entreats, and then let me
I'll find a day to massacre them all,

And raze their faction, and their

Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus,

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd. [lord:]

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my
These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;—

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconciled your friends and you.—

For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,

That you will be more mild and tractable.—
And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia;—

By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven, and to his highness,

That, what we did, was mildly, as we might,

Tend'ring our sister's honour, and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.—

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats, [here,

I do remit these young men's heinous faults.
Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends:—

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,

With horn and hound, we'll give your grace
bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. The same. Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot: and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning's flash;
Advanced above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.—

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch; whom thou in triumph long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains;
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds, and idle thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.

To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis;—this queen,
This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck, and his commonweal's.
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge

And manners, to intrude where I am graced;
And may, for aught thou know'st affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost overween in all;
And so in this to bear me down with braves.

'Tis not the difference of a year or two

Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou

To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace *;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,

And lead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace. [advised,

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother un-gave you a dancing-rapier † by your side,

Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends?

Go to; have your lath glued within your sheath,
Till you know better how to handle it. [have,

Chi. Mean while, sir, with the little skill I
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave?
[They draw.]

Aar. Why, how now, lords?
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,

And maintain such a quarrel openly?

Full well I wot ‡ the ground of all this grudge;
I would not for a million of gold, [cerns]

The cause were known to them it most connor would your noble mother, for much more,

Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I; till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and, withal, [throat,

Thrust these reproachful speeches down his
That he hath breathed in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepared and full resolved,— [tongue

And with thy weapon nothing darest perform

Aar. Away, I say.—

* Favour. † This was the usual outcry for assistance, when any riot in the street happened

‡ A sword worn in dancing.

§ Know.

Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—
Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous
It is to jut upon a prince's right?
What, is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controulment, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware!—an should the empress know [please.]

This discord's ground, the music would not
Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world;

I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not,
How furious and impatient they be, [in Rome
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths

Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her!—How?

Dem. Why makest thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be loved.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive*, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have yet worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.
[Aside.]

Dem. Then why should he despair, that knows to count it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?

What, hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why then, it seems, some certain
Would serve your turns. [snatch or so]

Chi. Ay, so the turn were served.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. 'Would you had hit it too;
Then should not we be tired with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye,—And are you such fools,

To square† for this? Would it offend you then
That both should speed?

Chi. P'faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me.

So I were one. [that you jar.]

Aar. For shame, be friends; and join for
'Tis policy and stratagem must do

That you affect; and so must you resolve;
That what you cannot, as you would, achieve,

You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:

The forest walks are wide and spacious;

And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind; for rape and villany:
Single you thither then this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our empress, with her sacred
To villany and vengeance consecrate, wit
Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull; [your turns:]

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take
There serve your last, shadow'd from heaven's
And revel in Lavinia's treasury. [eye,

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no coward-dice. [stream

SCENE II. A Forest near Rome. A Lodge

Hounds heard.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters,
&c. MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey, [green.]

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are Uncomple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince; and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.

Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To tend the emperor's person carefully:

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspired.

Horns wind a Peal. Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, CHIRON,
DEMETRIUS, and Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty;
Madam, to you as many and as good!

I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?
Lav. I say, no;

I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport:—Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting. [To TAMORA.

Mar. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,

And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the SCENE III. A desert part of the Forest.Enter AARON, with a Bag of Gold.

Aar. He, that had wit, would think that I
To bury so much gold under a tree, [had none
And never after to inherit* it.

Let him, that thinks of me so abjectly,
Know, that this gold must coin a stratagem;
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany:

And so repose, sweet gold, for thy unrest†,
[Hides the Gold.
That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,

When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chant melody on every bush;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground:
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And,—whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tuned horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,—
Let us sit down and mark their yelling noise:
And,—after conflict such as was supposed
The wandering prince of Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surprised,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds, and horns, and sweet melody
Be unto us, as is a nurse's song [ous birds,
Of lullaby, to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your Saturn is dominator over mine:— [desires,
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs;
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora,—the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in
This is the day of doom for Bassianus; [thee,—
His Philomel† must lose her tongue to-day;
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll:—
Now question me no more, we are espied;
Here comes a parcel§ of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life! [comes:

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus
Be cross with him, and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. [Exit.

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her;
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments:

Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-
'Tis pity they should take him for a stag. [day!

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cim-merian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequestered from all your train?
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot, [steed,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her 'joy her raven-coloured love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The king, my brother, shall have note of this. [noted long:

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him
Good king! to be so mightily abused!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother,

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale!

These two have 'ticed me hither to this place,
A barren, detested vale, you see, it is:

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss, and baleful misletoe.

Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds
Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven.

And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins||,

Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body, bearing it,

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this bellish tale,

But straight they told me they would bind me
Unto the body of a dismal yew; [here

And leave me to this miserable death.

And then they called me, foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect.
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed:
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth called my children.

SCENE IV. The same.

Enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords; the better foot before:

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit, Where I espy'd the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes. [for shame,

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here;

That he thereby may give a likely guess, How these were they that made away his brother. [Exit AARON.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out

From this unhal'ow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear: A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints; My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,

Aaron and thou look down into this den, And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassion ate heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing, whereat it trembles by surmise:
O, tell me how it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know
'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of this pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—
Out of this fell-devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help. [again,

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee.

[Falls in.

Enter SATURNINUS and AARON.

Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole is here.

And what he is, that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou, that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead? I know thou dost
but jest:

He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there. [alive,

Mart. We know not where you left him all
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though grieved with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound;

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a Letter.

The complot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] *An if we miss to meet him

O, Tamora! was ever heard the like?

This is the pit, and this the elder tree:

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. [Showing it.

Sat. Two of thy whelps, [To Tit.] fell cure of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life:—
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;
There let them bide, until we have devised
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accused, if the fault be proved in them,—

Sat. If it be proved! you see, it is apparent.

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?
Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail:
For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see, thou follow me. [derers:]

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE V. The same.

her Tongue cut out.*

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON]

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; Where is your husband?—
If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!—
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungente hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare

Of her two branches? those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in;

And might not gain so great a happiness,
As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy-rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee;
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,—
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face,
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so?

O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,

That I might rail at him to ease my mind!
Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;
A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sewed than Philomel.
O, had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them;

[Life:

ACT III.

SCENE I. Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the Place of Execution: TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought!
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.
For these, these tribunes, in the dust I write

Throwing himself on the Ground.
My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears.

Let my tears staunch the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, &c., with the Prisoners.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers:
In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow,

And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn.
O, reverend tribunes! gentle aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father, you lament in vain;
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead:

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,

[Mark,
They would not mark me; or, if they did
All bootless to them, they'd not pity me.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they're better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale:
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me.
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.

A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones:

A stone is silent, and offendeth not; [death.
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to

* Orpheus.

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death :

For which attempt, the judges have pronounced My everlasting doom of banishment. [thee.]

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive

That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers? Tigers must prey ; and Rome affords no prey,

But me and mine : How happy art thou then, From these devourers to be banished ?

But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep ; Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break ;

I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? let me see it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ah me ! this object kills me !

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her :—

Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?

What fool hath added water to the sea?

Or brought a fagot to bright-burning Troy?

My grief was at the height before thou camest, And now, like Nilus*, it disdaineth bounds.—

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too ; For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain ;

And they have nursed this woe, in feeding life ; In bootless prayer have they been held up,

And they have served me to effectless use :

Now, all the service I require of them

Is, that the one will help to cut the other.

'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands ; For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath marty'd thee? [thoughts.]

Mar. O, that delightful engine of her That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage :

Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear !

Luc. O say thou for her, who hath done this deed? [park.]

Mar. O, thus I found her, straying in the Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,

That hath received some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my deer, and he, that wounded her, [dead:]

Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me For now I stand as one upon a rock,

Environ'd with a wilderness of sea ; [wave,] Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by

Expecting ever when some envious surge

Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone ; Here stands my other son, a banish'd man ;

And here, my brother, weeping at my woes ; But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul,—

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

It would have madd'd me : What shall I do Now I behold thy lively body so?

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears ; Nor tongue to tell me who hath marty'd thee :

Thy husband he is dead ; and, for his death, Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this :—

Look, Marcus ! ah, son Lucius, look on her ! When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks ; as doth the honey dew Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband :

Perchance, because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them. No, no, they would not do so foul a deed ;

Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.— Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips ;

Or make some sign how I may do thee ease : Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain ; Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd? like meadows, yet not With miry slime left on them by a flood? [dry]

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long, Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears? Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb Pass the remainder of our hateful days? [shows]

What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues, Plot some device of further misery,

To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears ; for, at your grief,

See, how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Mar. Patience, dear niece :—good Titus, dry thine eyes. [wilt.]

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I Thy napkin† cannot drink a tear of mine,

For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks. [her signs:]

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark ! I understand Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say

That to her brother which I said to thee ; His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,

Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks, O, what a sympathy of woe is this?

As far from help as limbo is from bliss !

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor Sends thee this word,—That, if thou love thy

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus, [sons] Or any one of you, chop off your hand,

And send it to the king : be for the same, Will send thee hither both thy sons alive ;

And that shall be the ransom for their fault, Tit. O, gracious emperor ! O gentle Aaron ‡ Handkerchief.

With all my heart, I'll send the emperor
My hand :

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father; for that noble hand of thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent : my hand will serve the turn :
My youth can better spare my blood than you ;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers'
lives. [fended Rome.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not de-
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle ?
O, none of both but are of high desert :
My hand hath been but idle ; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death ;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go along,

For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven it shall not go.

Tit. Sirs, strive no more ; such wither'd herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you ; I will spare my
Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe. [hand.

Mar. But I will use the axe.
[Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Come hither, Aaron ; I'll deceive them both ;

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,

And never, whilst I live, deceive men so :—

But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour can pass.

[Aside.

[He cuts off TITUS's Hand.

Enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now, stay your strife ; what shall be, is despatch'd.—

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand :

Tell him, it was a hand that ward'd him

From thousand dangers ; bid him bury it ;

More bath it merited, that let it have.

As for my sons, say, I account of them

As jewels purchased at an easy price ;

And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus : and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee :—
Their heads, I mean.—O, how this villany

[Aside.

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it !

Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,

Aaron will have his soul black like his face.
[Exit.

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth :
If any power pities wretched tears,

To that I call ;—What, wilt thou kneel with me ? [To LAVINIA.

Do then, dear heart ; for heaven shall hear our prayers ;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. O ! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom ?

Then be my passions* bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries
Then into limits could I bind my woes :

When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow ?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face !

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil ?

I am the sea ; bark, how her sighs do blow !

She is the weeping welkin, I the earth :

Then must my sea be moved with her sighs ;

Then must my earth with her continual tears

Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd :

For why ? my bowels cannot hide her woes,

But like a drunkard must I vomit them.

Then give me leave ; for losers will have leave

To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with Two Heads and a Hand. [paid

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou re-
For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.

Here are the heads of thy two noble sons ;

And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back ;

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd :

That woe is me to think upon thy woes,

More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.

Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,

And be my heart an ever-burning hell !

These miseries are more than may be borne !

To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal,

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah that this sight should make so deep a wound,

And yet detested life not shrink thereat !

That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe !

[LAVINIA kisses him.

Mar. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfort-
As frozen water to a starved snake. [less,

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end ? [nics ;

Mar. Now, farewell, flattery : Die, Andro-
Thou dost not slumber : see, thy two sons' heads ;

Thy warlike hand ; thy mangled daughter here ;

Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight

Struck pale and bloodless ; and thy brother I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah ! now no more will I control thy griefs :

Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand [sigh

Gnawing with thy teeth ; and be this dismal

The closing up of our most wretched eyes !

Now is a time to storm ; why art thou still ?

* Sufferings.

† The sky.

‡ Stir, bustle.

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! [this hour.

Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with
Tit. Why I have not another tear to shed:

Besides this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears;
Then which way shall I find revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me;
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be returned again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people, circle me about;
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Ereunt TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woeful'st man that ever lived in Rome!
Farewell, proud Rome! till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, 'would thou wert as thou 'tfore hast been!
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturninus and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be revenged on Rome and Saturnine. [Exit.

SCENE II. A Room in Titus's House. A Banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look, you eat no

Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
MARCUS, unknot that sorrow-wreathen knot;

Is left to tyrannize upon my breast; [mine
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.—
Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

[To LAVINIA.

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking in,

Drown the lamenting fool in sea salt tears.

Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life!
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er, [hands,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.—
Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands!—
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:— Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says:—

I can interpret all her martyr'd signs;
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears.
Brew'd with her sorrows, mesh'd upon her cheeks*:—

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to
heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I, of these, will wrest an alphabet,
And, by still practice, learn to know thy meaning. [laments:]

Mar. Alas, the tender boy, in passion moved,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.—

[MARCUS strikes the Dish with a Knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife? [a fly.]

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord;
Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not Titus' brother: Get thee gone;
I see, thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.
Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother?

How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buz lamenting doings in the air?
Poor harmless fly!

That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast
kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me, sir; 'twas a black ill-favoured fly, [him]

Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd

There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.—
Ah, sirrah*!—
Yet I do think we are not brought so low,
But that, between us, we can kill a fly,
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Mar. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances

And thou shalt read, when mine begins to

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The same. Before Titus's House.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia

Follows me every where, I know not why :—
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes!
Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her :
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad ;
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy [fear ;
Ran mad through sorrow : That made me to

I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Mar. Lucius, I will.

[LAVINIA turns over the books which
LUCIUS has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia?—Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see :—
Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd ;
Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.—
Why lifts she up her arms in sequence? thus?

Mar. I think, she means, that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact :—Ay, more there was :
Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth
so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis ;
My mother gave't me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!—

To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts.

And arm the minds of infants to exclains.

My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;

And swear with me,—as with the woful

And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame,

Lord Junius Brutus, swear for Lucrece' rape,—

That we will prosecute, by good advice,

Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,

And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how,

But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware;

The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,

She's with the lion deeply still in league,

And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,

And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list.

You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;

And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,

And with a gad of steel will write these words,

And lay it by: the angry northern wind

Will blow these sands, like Sibyl's leaves,

For this ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armory;

Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy

Shall carry from me to the empress' sons

Presents, that I intend to send them both:

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;

He hath some message to deliver to us.

grandfather. [may,

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue:

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora, Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

SCENE III. The same. A public Place.

Enter TITUS, bearing Arrows, with Letters at the ends of them; with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, and other Gentlemen, with Bows.

Clo. Ho! the gibbet-maker? he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven? alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid, I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs*, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, Lords, and Others: SATURNINUS with the Arrows in his Hand, that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus: and, for the extent Of equal justice, used in such contempt?

And now he writes to heaven for his redress: See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;

This to Apollo; this to the god of war: Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!

What's this, but libelling against the senate, And blazoning our injustice every where?

But he and his shall know that justice lives In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,

He'll so awake, as she in fury shall Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

With golden promises; that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.

And bury all thy fear in my devices.

That both mine eyes were rainy like to his;

And when I told the empress of this sport,

She swoonded almost at my pleasing tale,

And, for my tidings, gave me twenty kisses.

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me. [thee.]

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to Lo, by thy side were Rape, and Murder, stands;

Now give some 'surance that thou art Revenge,

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels;
And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globes.
Provide thee proper palfries, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And, when thy car is laden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long;
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea.
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and comwith me. [call'd.]

Tit. Are they thy ministers? what are they

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called so, [men.]

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of Tit. Good lord, how like the empress' sons they are!

And you, the empress! But we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee:
And, if one arm's embracement will content
I will embrace thee in it by and by. [thee,

[Exit TITUS, from above.

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy:
Whate'er I forge, to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches.
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius, his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter TITUS.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for
thee:

Welcome, dread fury, to my woful house;—
Rapine, and Murder, you are welcome too:—
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?—
For, well I wot, the empress never wags,
But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil:
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, An-dronicus? [him.]

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with
Chi. Show me a villain, that hath done a

And I am sent to be revenged on him. [rape, Tam. Show me a thousand, that hath done thee wrong,

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome;

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer.—
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee.

Good Rapine, stab him; he is a -avisher.

* Perhaps this is a stage direction, crept into the text.

Go thou with them; and in the emperor's
There is a queen, attended by a Moor; [court
Well may'st thou know her by thy own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee;
I pray thee, do on them some violent death,
They have been violent to me and mine. [we do.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike
Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device? [calls.

Tit. Marcus, my brother!—'tis sad Titus
Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too Feast at my house: and he shall feast with them.

This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return again.
[Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay
with me;

Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. What say you, boys? will you abide Whiles I go tell mylord the emperor, [with him,
How I have govern'd our determined jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair, [Aside.

And tarry with him, till I come again.

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad;

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,
A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dam. [Aside.

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure, leave us here. [goes

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now
To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

[Exit TAMORA.
Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge,
farewell.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd? [do.—

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publius, and Others.

Pub. What's your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. Th' empress' sons, take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceived;

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name:
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them:
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it; therefore bind them sure;
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit TITUS.—PUBLIUS, &c., lay hold on CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Chi. Villains, forbear: we are the empress' sons. [commanded.—

Pub. And therefore do we what we are Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word: [fast.

Is he sure bound? look, that you bind them
Re-enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with LAVI-NIA; she bearing a Basin, and he a Knife.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound;— [me;

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.
O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud;

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband; and, for that vile fault,
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death:
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest:

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that,
more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forced.
What would you say, if I should let you speak? [grace.

Villains, for shame you could not beg for
Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats;
Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin, that receives your guilty blood.

You know, your mother means to feast with
me, [mad,—

And calls herself, Revenge, and thinks me
Hark, villains; I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, I'll make a
And of the paste a coffin * I will rear, [paste;
And make two pasties of your shameful heads;
And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
Like to the earth, swallow her own increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,
And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;

For worse than Philomel you used my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be revenged:

And now prepare your throats.—Lavinia,
come, [He cuts their throats.

Receive the blood: and, when that they are dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it;

And in that paste let their vile heads be baked.
Come, come, be every one officious [prove

To make this banquet; which I wish may
More stern and bloody than the Centaur's feast.

So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,

* Crust of raised pie.

And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.

[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

SCENE III. The same. A Partition, with Tables, &c.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and Goths, with AARON, Prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's That I repair to Rome, I am content. [mind, I Goth. And ours, with thine, befall what fortune will. [Moor,

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil ; Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him, Till he be brought unto the empress' face, For testimony of her foul proceedings : And see the ambush of our friends be strong : I fear, the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear, And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart !

Luc. Away, inhuman dog ! unhallow'd slave ! Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—

[Exeunt Goths, with AARON. Flourish. The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with Tribunes, Senators, and Others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more sons than one ? [sun ?

Luc. What boots * it thee, to call thyself a Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break † the parle ;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.

The feast is ready, which the careful Titus Hath ordained to an honourable end, [Rome : For peace, for love, for league, and good to Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take Sat. Marcus, we will. [your places.

[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at Table.

Enter TITUS, dressed like a Cook. LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others.

Titus places the Dishes on the Table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord : welcome, dread queen ; [cious ;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths ; welcome, Luc. And welcome, all : although the cheer be poor, [it.

'Twill fill your stomachs ; please you eat of Sat. Why art thou thus attired, Andronicus ? [well,

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus. [you were.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, My lord the emperor, resolve me this ;

Was it well done of rash Virginus, To slay his daughter with his own right-hand,

Because she was enforced, stain'd, and de- Sat. It was, Andronicus. [flour'd ?

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord !

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual ; A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant, For me, most wretched to perform the like : Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee : [He kills LAVINIA.

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die ! Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind ?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woful as Virginus was :

And have a thousand times more cause than he To do this outrage ;—and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd ? tell, who did the deed. [highness feed ?

Tit. Will' please you eat ? will't please you Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus ?

Tit. Not I ; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius ;

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue, And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that Whereof their mother daintily hath fed, [pie ;

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred. 'Tis true, 'tis true ; witness my knife's sharp point. [Killing TAMORA.

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed. [Killing TITUS.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed ? [deed.

There's need for meed, death for a deadly [Kills SATURNINUS. A great Tumult.

The People in confusion disperse.

MARCUS, LUCIUS, and their Partisans ascend the Steps before TITUS'S House.

Mar. Yon sad-faced men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O, let me teach you how to knit again This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,

These broken limbs again into one body.

Sen. Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself ;

And she, whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to, Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,

Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age, Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,—

Speak, Rome's dear friend ; [To LUCIUS.] as erst our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,

The story of that baleful burning night. [Troy ;

When subtle Greeks surprised king Priam's Tell us, what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in, That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.—

My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel ; Nor can I niter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory, And break my very utterance ; even i' the time

* Advantage, benefit.

When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration :
Here is a captain, let him tell the tale ;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him

Luc. Then noble auditory, be it known to
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius [ther ;
Were they that murdered our emperor's bro-
And they it were that ravished our sister :
For their fell faults our brothers were behead-

Our father's tears despised ; and basely co-
Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel
And sent her enemies unto the grave. [out,

Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies ;
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And oped their arms to embrace me as a friend :
And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you,
That have preserved her welfare in my blood ;
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.

Alas ! you know I am no vaunter, I ;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just, and full of truth.
But, soft ; methinks, I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise : O, pardon me ;
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves. [child.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak ; Behold this [Pointing to the Child in the arms of an Attendant.

Of this was Tamora delivered ;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes ;
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge, what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you,
Romans ?

Have we done aught amiss ? Show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak ; and, if you say, we shall,

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor ; for, well I know,
The common voice do cry, it shall be so.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail ;
Rome's royal emperor !

Lucius, &c. descend.

Mar. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house ;
[To an Attendant.

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail ;
Rome's gracious governor !

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans : May I govern
so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe !
But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,—

For nature puts me to a heavy task ;—
Stand all aloof :—but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk :—
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, [Kisses Titus.

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
The last true duties of thy noble son ! [face,

Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips :

O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them !

Luc. Come hither, boy ; come, come, and learn of us [well :

To melt in showers : Thy grandsire loved thee
Many a time he danced thee on his knee,

Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow ;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,

Meet, and agreeing with thine infancy ;
In that respect then, like a loving child, [spring,

Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
Because kind nature doth require it so : [woe :

Friends should associate friends in grief and
Bid him farewell ; commit him to the grave ;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire ! even with all
my heart

Would I were dead, so you did live again !—
O lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping

My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.
Enter Attendants, with AARON.

1 Rom. You sad Andronici, have done with Give sentence on this execrable wretch, [woes,

That hath been breeder of these dire events.
Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him ;

There let him stand and rave, and cry for food !
If any one relieves or pities him,

For the offence he dies. This is our doom :
Some stay, to see him fastened in the earth.

Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb ?

I am no baby, I, that, with base prayers,
I should repent the evils I have done ;

Ten thousand worse, than ever yet I did,
Would I perform, if I might have my will

If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave :
My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith

Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,

No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial ;

But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity ;

And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done to Aaron, that damn'd Moor

By whom our heavy haps had their beginning.
Then afterwards, to order well the state ;

That like events may ne'er it ruinate.
[Exeunt

ACT I.

Enter GOWER.*

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song of old† was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come;
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves, and holy ales‡;
 And lords and ladies of their lives
 Have read it for restoratives:
 'I purpose to make men glorious;
Et quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
 And that to hear an old man sing,
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.—
 This city then, Antioch the great
 Built up for his chiefest seat;
 The fairest in all Syria;
 (I tell you what mine authors say:)
 This king unto him took a pheere§,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke:
 Bad father! to entice his own
 To evil, should be done by none.

Chorus, in the character of Gower, an ancient English Poet, who has related the story of this play in his Confessio Amantis. † i.e., That of old. ‡ Whitsun-ales, &c. Accounted.

* Pointing to the scene of the palace-gate at Antioch, on which the heads of those unfortunate wights were fixed.

By custom, what they did begin,
 Was, with long use, account|| no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
 Which to prevent, he made a law,
 (To keep her still, and men in awe,)
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life:
 So for her many a wight did die,
 As yon grim looks do testify¶.
 What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
 I give, my cause who best can justify.

[Exit.]

SCENE I. Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large received
 The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul
 Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
 Think death no hazard, in this enterprise.

[Music.]

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,

For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, (till Lucina reign'd,) Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face, the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever rased, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
Ye gods that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflamed desire in my breast,
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
A countless glory, which desert must gain:
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.

Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, advent'rous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance pale,

That, without covering, save yon field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;

And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath
My frail mortality to know itself, [taught
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must:
For death remember'd, should be like a mirror, [error.

Who tells us, life's but breath; to trust it,
I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,

Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did;
So I bequeath a happy peace to you,
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the earth from whence they came;
But my unspotted fire of love to you.

[To the Daughter of Antiochus.

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus,
Scorning advice.

Ant. Read the conclusion then;
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. In all, save that, may'st thou prove prosperous!

In all, save that, I wish thee happiness!

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,

Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

[He reads the Riddle.]

*I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh, which did me breed:
I sought a husband, in which labour,
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.*

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers!
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?

Fair glass of light, I loved you, and could still,
[Takes hold of the hand of the princess.

Were not this glorious casket stored with ill:
But I must tell you,—now, my thoughts revolt;

For he's no man on whom perfections wait,
That knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings:
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken;

But, being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime:
Good sooth, I care not for you. [life,

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expired;
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it;

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;
For vice repeated, is like the wand'ring wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear:
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts [is wrong'd

Copp'd* hills towards heaven, to tell, the earth
By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for't.

Kings are earth's gods: in vice their law's their will;

And if Jove stray, who dares say, Jove doth
It is enough you know; and it is fit, [ill?
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.

All love the womb that their first beings bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning;—

But I will gloze† with him. [Aside.] Young prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,

* Rising to a top or head.

† Flatter, insinuate.

We might proceed to cancel of your days*;
 Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
 As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
 Forty days longer we do respite you;
 If by which time our secret be undone,
 This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son:
 And until then, your entertain shall be,
 As doth befit our honour, and your worth.

[Exeunt ANTIOCHUS, his Daughter,
 and Attendants.]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover
 When what is done is like an hypocrite, [sin!
 The which is good in nothing but in sight.
 If it be true that I interpret false,
 Then were it certain, you were not so bad,
 As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
 Where† now you're both a father and a son,
 By your untimely claspings with your child,
 (Which pleasure fits an husband, not a father;)
 And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
 By the defiling of her parent's bed;
 And both like serpents are, who though they feed

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
 Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
 Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
 Will shun no course to keep them from the light.

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
 Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke.
 Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
 Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame:
 Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,

By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for the
 To have his head. [which we mean
 He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
 Nor tell the world, Antiochus doth sin
 In such a loathed manner:
 And therefore instantly this prince must die;
 For by his fall my honour must keep high.
 Who attends on us there?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard, you're of our chamber, and our mind

Partakes her private actions to your secrecy;
 And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
 Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold; [kill him;

We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must
 It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
 Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal.

'Tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough? [haste.
 Lest your breath cool yourself, telling your Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.

[Exit Messenger.]

Ant. As thou
 Will live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
 From a well-experienced archer, hits the mark

His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
 Unless thou say, prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I

Can get him once within my pistol's length,
 I'll make him sure; so farewell to your highness. [Exit.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu! till Pericles be dead,
 My heart can lend no succour to my head.

[Exit.

SCENE II. Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PERICLES, HELICANUS, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: Why this change of thoughts?

The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
 By me so used a guest is, not an hour,
 In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,
 (The tomb where grief should sleep,) can breed me quiet! [eyes shun them,

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine
 And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
 Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here:
 Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
 Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
 Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
 That have their first conception by mis-dread,
 Have after-nourishment and life by care;
 And what was first but fear what might be done;

Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
 And so with me;—the great Antiochus
 ('Gainst whom I am too little to contend, Since he's so great, can make his will his act;)
 Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;

Nor boots it me to say, I honour him,
 If he suspect I may dishonour him;
 And what may make him blush in being known.
 He'll stop the course by which it might be known;

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
 And with the ostent of war will look so huge.
 Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
 Our men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
 And subjects punish'd, that ne'er thought
 offence:

Which care of them, not pity of myself,
 (Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
 Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,) [guish,

 For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
 The thing the which is flatter'd, hit a spark,
 To which that breath gives heat and stronger

When signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,

He flatters you, makes war upon your life :
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please ;

Per. All leave us else ; but let your cares o'erlook.

Where, as thou know'st, against the face of I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,

To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms, And make pretence of wrong that I have done him ;

When all, for mine, if I may call't offence, Must feel war's blow, who spares not inno- cence :

Which love to all (of which thyself art one, Who now reproveth me for it)——

Hel. Alas, sir !

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,

Musings into my mind, a thousand doubts How I might stop this tempest, ere it came ;

And finding little comfort to relieve them, I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,

Freely I'll speak. Antiochus you fear, And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,

Who either by public war, or private treason Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while, Till that his rage and anger be forgot,

Or Destinies do cut his thread of life.

Your rule direct to any ; if to me, Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith ;

But should he wrong my liberties in absence—
Hel. We'll mingle bloods together in the earth

From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee ; And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.

The care I had and have of subjects' good, On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath ; Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both :

But in our orbs* we'll live so round and safe, That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince†,

Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. Tyre. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court. Here must I kill king Pericles ; and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home : 'tis dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for it : for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush, here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Further to question of your king's departure. His seal'd commission, left in trust with me.

Doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. How ! the king gone ! [Aside.

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied, Why, as it were unlicensed of your loves,

He would depart, I'll give some light unto you Being at Antioch——

Thal. What from Antioch ? [Aside

* In our different spheres.

† Overcome.

Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not,) [judged so:
Took some displeasure at him; at least he And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd;
To show his sorrow, would correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive [Aside.
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
But since he's gone, the king it sure must please,
He 'scaped the land, to perish on the seas.—
But I'll present me. Peace to the Lords of Tyre!

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is well.

Thal. From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles;
But, since my landing, as I have understood
Your lord has took himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, since Commended to our master, not to us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,—
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Tharsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire, in hope to quench it;
For who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one mountain, to cast up a higher.

O my distressed lord, even such our griefs;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mistful eyes, [rise.

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher

Cle. O Dionyza, [it.
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants
Or can conceal his hunger, till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep our woes

Into the air; our eyes do weep, till lungs
Fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;
that,

If heaven slumber, while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak, help me with

Dio. I'll do my best, sir. [tears.

Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have government,
(A city on whom plenty held full hand.)

For riches, strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted* and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stored full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on, as delight;

All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O, 'tis too true. [our change,

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea,
and air,

Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance
As houses are defiled for want of use, [ance,
They are now starved for want of exercise:

Those palates, who not yet two summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it;
Those mothers who, to nurse up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now,
To eat those little darlings whom they loved.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,

Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true? [it.

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness
Cle. O, let those cities, that of Plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here. [haste,
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st, in
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore,

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.
Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir,
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery, [power],
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear: for, by the semblance [peace,

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat, [deceit,

Who makes the fairest show, means, most:
But bring they what they will, what need we fear? [there,

The ground's the low'st, and we are half way
Go tell their general, we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he
And what he craves. [comes,

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace con
If wars, we are unable to resist. [sist];

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are Let not our ships and number of our men,

§ Forces.

† To dress them by.

|| If he stands on peace.

Be, like a beacon fired, to amaze your eyes.
 We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
 And seen the desolation of your streets:
 Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
 But to relieve them of their heavy load;
 And these our ships you happily* may think
 Are, like the Trojan horse, war stuff'd within,
 With bloody views, expecting overthrow,
 Are stored with corn, to make your needy bread, [half dead.
 And give them life, who are hunger-starved.
All. The gods of Greece protect you!
 And we'll pray for you.
Per. Rise I pray you, rise;

We do not look for reverence, but for love.
 And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.
Cle. The which when any shall not gratify
 Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
 Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
 The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
 Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen,)
 Your grace is welcome to our town and us.
Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while,
 Until our stars that frown, lend us a smile.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
 His child, I wist, to incest bring;
 A better prince, and benign lord,
 Prove awful both in deed and word.
 Be quiet then, as men should be,
 Till he hath pass'd necessity.
 I'll show you those in trouble's reign,
 Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
 The good in conversation †
 (To whom I give my benison §,)
 Is still at Tharsus, where each man
 Thinks all is writ he spoken can;
 And, to remember what he does,
 Gild his statue glorious:
 But tidings to the contrary
 Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb Show.

*Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman with a Letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the Letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERICLES,

Gow. Good Helicane hath staid at home,
 Not to eat honey, like a drone,
 From others' labours; forth he strive
 To killen bad, keep good alive;
 And, to fulfil his prince's desire
 Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
 How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
 And hid intent to murder him;
 And that in Tharsus was not best
 Longer for him to make his rest:
 He knowing so, put forth to seas,
 Where when men begin, there's seldom ease;
 For now the wind begins to blow;
 Thunder above, and deeps below,
 Make such unquiet, that the ship
 Should house him safe, is wreck'd and split;
 And he, good prince, having all lost,
 By waves from coast to coast is tost:
 All perishen of man, of pelf,
 Ne aught escapen but himself;
 Till fortune, tired with doing bad,
 Threw him ashore, to give him glad:

And here he comes: what shall be next,
 Pardon old Gower; this long's the text.

[Exit.]

SCENE I. Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven! [man
 Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly
 Is but a substance that must yield to you;
 And I, as fits my nature, do obey you;
 Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
 Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
 Nothing to think on, but ensuing death: [breath
 Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,
 To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
 And having thrown him from your wat'ry grave,

Here to have deatn in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilche!

2 Fish. Ho! come, and bring away the nets.

1 Fish. What Patch-breech, I say!

3 Fish. What say you, master?

1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannion.

3 Fish. 'Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us, even now.

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls! it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us, to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounced and tumbled? they say, they are half fish, half flesh:
 a plague on them, they ne'er come, but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him,
 and at last devours them all at a mouthful.
 Such whales have I heard on 't the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

* Perhaps.

† Know

‡ i. e., Conduct, behaviour.

§ Blessing.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallow'd me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How from the finny subject of the sea These fishers tell the infirmities of men; And from their wat'ry empire recollect All that may men approve, or men detect! Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody will look after it.

Per. Nay, see, the sea hath cast upon your coast—

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea; to cast thee in our way?

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,

In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon, entreats you pity him; He asks of you, that never used to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practised it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know;

But what I am, want teaches me to think on; A man shrunk up with cold: my veins are chill, And have no more of life, than may suffice To give my tongue that heat, to ask your help; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die, quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and more o'er puddings and flap-jacks*, and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd then?

2 Fish. O, not all my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipp'd, I would wish no better office, than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exeunt two of the Fishermen.]

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, sir! do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so call'd, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since from his subjects

He gains the name of good, by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to just and tourney† for her love.

Per. Did but my fortunes equal my desires, I'd wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter the Two Fishermen, drawing up a Net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help; here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bobs on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turn'd to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you let me see it.

Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all my crosses, Thou givest me somewhat to repair myself; And, though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge, (even as he left his life,)

Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield 'Twixt me and death; (and pointed to this brace‡:)

[sigh]
For that it saved me, keep it; in like necessity, which gods protect thee from! it may defend It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it; [thee. Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd, they give't again: I thank thee for't; my shipwreck's now no ill, Since I have here my father's gift by will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat For it was sometime target to a king; [of worth, I know it by this mark. He loved me dearly, And for his sake, I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

Where with't I may appear a gentleman; And if that ever my low fortune's better, I'll pay your bounties; till then, rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend

* Pancakes.

Per. Believe't, I will. [steel;
Now, by your furtherance, I am clothed in
And spite of all the rupture of the sea,
This jewel holds his bidding* on my arm;
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.—
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases†.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will;
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. A public Way, or Platform, leading to the Lists. A Pavilion by the side of it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the 1 Lord. They are, my liege; [triumph?
And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them‡, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory, if neglected,
So princes their renown, if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight, in his device§.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight: he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer|| himself? [father;

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Æthiop, reaching at the sun;
The word¶, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you. [The second Knight passes.

Who is the second that presents himself?
Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady:
The motto thus, in Spanish, *Piu per dulçura que per fuerza.

[The third Knight passes.

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai.

The third of Antioch;
And his device a wreath of chivalry:

The word, Me pompa provexit apex.

[The fourth Knight passes.

Sim. What is the fourth? [down;

Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside
The word, Quod me alit, me extinguit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes.

Thai. The fifth an hand environed with clouds; [tried;

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend:

For, by his rusty outside, he appears

To have practised more the whipstock†† than the lance. [comes

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour
Until this day to scour it in the dust. [rust

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw

Into the gallery. [Exeunt.

[Great shouts; and all cry, The mean
Knight.

SCENE III. *The same. A Hall of State.
A Banquet prepared.*

*Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, Knights,
and Attendants.*

Sim. Knights,
To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit. [yours;

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.

In framing artists, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;

o' the feast, [place:
(For, daughter, so you are,) here take your Marshal the rest as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good
Simonides. [we love,

Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour
For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Mar. Sir, yond's your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen,

That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sit, sir; sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,

These cates rest me*, she not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all the viands that I eat
Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat;
Sure he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but
A country gentleman; [done;
He has done no more than other knights have Broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass. [ther's picture,

Per. Yon king's to me, like to my fa-
Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit like stars about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence.
None that beheld him, but like lesser lights,
Did vail † their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light;
Whereby I see that time's the king of men,
For he's their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?

1 Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stored unto the brim,

(As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,)

We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while;

Yon knight, methinks, doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it

To me, my father?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter:
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them: and princes, not doing so,
Are like to gnats, which make a sound, but kill'd
Are wonder'd at. [say,
Therefore, to make's entrance more sweet, here
We drink this standing bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me

Unto a stranger knight to be so bold;
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. Now, by the gods, he could not please me better. [Aside.

Sim. And further tell him, we desire to know,
Of whence he is, his name and parentage.

Thai. The king, my father, sir, has drunk

Per. I thank him. [to you.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life. [him freely.

Per. I thank both him and yon, and pledge

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre—(my name
Pericles,

My education being in arts and arms;—
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And, after shipwreck, driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself
A gentleman of Tyre, who only by [Pericles,
Misfortune of the seas has been bereft
Of ships and men, and cast upon this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,

And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd †,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.

I will not have excuse, with saying, this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads;
Since they love men in arms, as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.
So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.

Come, sir;
Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip;
And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are,
my lord.

Sim. O, that's as much, as you would be de-ny'd [The Knights and Ladies dance.
Of your fair courtesy.—Unclasp, unclasp;
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
But you the best. [To PERICLES.] Pages and lights, conduct [Yours, sir

These knights unto their several lodgings:
We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
For that's the mark I know you level at;
Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
To morrow, all for speeding do their best.

[Exeunt.

In a chariot of inestimable value, [him,

Their bodies, even to loathing; for they sostunk,
That all those eyes adored them * ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard

To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter three Lords.

Or council, has respect with him but he.

And now at length they overflow their banks.
Hel. Your griefs, for what? wrong not the prince you love. [Helicane;

If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;

And leaves us to our free election.

Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.

A twelvemonth longer, let me then entreat you
To forbear choice if the absence of your king;
If in which time expired he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like noblemen, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like d'iamonds sit about his crown.

1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not
And since Lord Helicane's enjoineth us, [yield;
We with our travels will endeavour it.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands;

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

Palace.

Knights meet him.*

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simo-nides. [you know,

mine;

I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!

Well, I commend her choice;

And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft, here he comes:—I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholden to you,

For your sweet music this last night: my ears,
I do protest, were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master. [lord.

And she'll your scholar be; therefore look to it.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage. [Aside.]

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.

I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No!—

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad.

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?
I am glad of it with all my heart. [Aside.] I'll I'll bring you in subjection— [tame you;
Will you, not having my consent, bestow
Your love and your affections on a stranger?

Or think, may be as great in blood as I.) [Aside.

mine,— [me,

Nay, come; your hands and lips must seal it
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for a further grief,—God give you joy!
What, are you both pleased?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters

Sim. What, are you both agreed? [it.

Both. Yes, please your majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you wed;
Then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.

ACT III.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked* hath the rout;
No din but snores, the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast.
Of this most pompous marriage-feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at th' oven's mouth,
As the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded;—Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly eche †;
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

*Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter.
PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to the former. Then enter
THAISA with child, and LYCHORIDA. SI-
MONIDES shows his daughter the letter;
she rejoices: she and PERICLES take leave of her father, and depart. Then SIMONIDES, &c., retire.*

Gow. By many a dear and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coignes †,
Which the world together joins,
Is made, with all due diligence,
That horse, and sail, and high expense,
Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre
(Fame answering the most strong inquire,)
To the court of king Simonides
Are letters brought; the tenour these:

Antiochus and his daughter's dead;
The men of Tyros, on the head
Of Helicannus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny there he hastes † appease;
Says to them, if king Pericles
Come not, in twice six moons, home,
He, obedient to their doom,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round,
And every one with claps 'gan sound,
*Our heir apparent is a king:
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?*
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen, with child, makes her desire
(Which who shall cross?) along to go;
(Omit we all their dole and woe;)
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut; but fortune's mood
Varies again; the grizzled north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and well-a-neighbor ††
Doth fall in travail with her fear:
And what ensues in this fell storm,
Shall, for itself, itself perform.

Conveniently the rest convey:
Which might not what by me is told.

This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost prince appears to speak. [Exit.]

1 Sail. Slack the bolins‡‡ there; thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.

2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard; the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it still hath been observed; and we are strong in earnest. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight.

Per. Be it as you think meet.—Most wretched!Lyc. Here she lies, sir. [queen!Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear,

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'll leave it At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner;

I'll bring the body presently. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter CERIMON, a Servant, and some persons who have been shipwrecked.Cer. Philemon, ho!Enter PHILEMON.Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men; It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night Till now I ne'er endured. [as this,

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return; There's nothing can be minister'd to nature, That can recover him. Give this to the 'pothecary,

Cer. O, you say well.

1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire§ about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
It is most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning|| were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have (Together with my practice,) made familiar
To me and to my aid, the blest infusions
That dwell in vegetables, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works and of her cures; which give me

A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus
pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restored;
And not your knowledge, personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon

Enter Two Servants with a Chest.

Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest;
'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set 't down, let's look on it.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight;
If the sea's stomach be o'charged with gold,
It is a good constraint of fortune, that
It belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caul'd and bitumed!—
Did the sea cast it up?

Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open;
Soft, soft!—it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril; so,—up with it.
O you most potent god! what's here? a corpse!

1 Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balin'd and entreaus'd

With bags of spices full! A passport too!
Apollo, perfect me i'the characters!

[Unfolds a scroll.

Here I give to understand, [Reads.

(If e'er this coffin drive a-land,)

I, king Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mundane cost.

Whofinds her, give her burying,

She was the daughter of a king;

Besides this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity!

If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe!—This chanced tonight.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look, how fresh she looks!—They were too rough,

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within;
Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,

And yet the fire of life kindle again

The overpressed spirits. I have heard

Of an Egyptian had nine hours lien dead,

By good appliance was recovered.

Enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and the cloths.—
The rough and woful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, 'beseech you.

The vial once more;—How thou stirr'st, thou block!—

The music there.—I pray you, give her air:—
Gentlemen,

This queen will live: nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her; she hath not been entranced

Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens, sir,

Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive; behold
Her eye-lids, cases to those heavenly jewels

Which Pericles hath lost,

Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;

The diamonds of a most praised water

Appear, to make the world twice rich. Olive,

And make us weep to hear your fate, fair
creature,

Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.

Thais. O dear Diana,
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world

2 Gent. Is not this strange! [Is this?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours;
Lend me your hands: to the next chamber

For her relapse is mortal. Come, come, come;
And Æsculapins guide us!

That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, Even on my yearning || time; but whether there Delivered or no, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say: But since king Pericles, My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again, A estal livery will I take me to, And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you Diana's temple is not distant far, [speak, Where you may 'bide until your date expire. Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all; Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles at Tyre, Welcomed to his own desire. His woful queen leave at Ephesus, To Dian there a votaress. Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast growing scene must find At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd In music, letters; who hath gain'd Of education all the grace, Which makes her both the heart and place Of general wonder. But alack! That monster envy, oft the wrack Of earned praise, Marina's life Seeks to take off by treason's knife. And in this kind hath our Cleon One daughter, and a wench full grown, Even ripe for marriage fight; this maid Hight ¶ Philoten: and it is said

For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be: Bc't when she weaved the sleided  silk With fingers, long, small, white as milk; Or when she would with sharp need † wound The cambric, which she made more sound By hurting it; or when to the lute She sung, and made the night-bird mute, That still records ‡ with moan; or when She would with rich and constant pen Vail to her mistress Dian; still This Philoten contends in skill With absolute §§ Marina: so With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts, And not as given. This so darks In Philoten all graceful marks, That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,

 For good Marina, that her daughter
 Might stand peerless by this slaughter.

 And cursed Dionyza hath

 Only I carry winged time

 Dionyza does appear,
 With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.

SCENE I. Tharsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember ; thou hast sworn to do it :

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
 Thou canst not do a thing i'the world so soon,
 To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflame love in thy bosom,
 Inflame too nicely ; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
 A soldier to thy purpose. [creature.

Leon. I'll do't ; but yet she is a goodly

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here

Weeping she comes for her old nurse's death.
 Thou art resolved ?

Leon. I am resolved.

Enter MARINA, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, no, I will rob Tellus‡ of her weed,
 To strew thy green with flowers : the yellows,
 The purple violets, and marigolds, [blues,
 Shall, as a chaplet, hang upon thy grave,
 While summer days do last. Ah me ! poor maid,

Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
 This world to me is like a lasting storm,
 Whirling me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina ! why do you keep alone ! [Do not

How chance my daughter is not with you ?
 Consume your blood with sorrowing : you have

A nurse of me. Lord ! how your favour's § changed

With this unprofitable woe ! Come, come ;
 Give me your wreath of flowers. Ere the sea

mar it, [there,
 Walk forth with Leonine || ; the air is quick
 Piercing, and sharpens well the stomach.

Come ;—

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you ;

I'll not bereave you of your servant.
Dion. Come, come ;

I love the king your father, and yourself,
 With more than foreign heart. We every day

Expect him here : when he shall come, and find

Our paragon to all reports, thus blasted,
 He will repent the breadth of his great voyage ;
 Blame both my lord and me, that we have ta'en

No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you,
 Walk, and be cheerful once again ; reserve
 That excellent complexion, which did steal
 The eyes of young and old. Care not for me ;
 I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go ;

But yet I have no desire to it. [you.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for Walk half an hour, Leantine, at the least ;
 Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while ;

Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood :
 What ! I must have a care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—
 [Exit DIONYZA.

Is this wind westerly that blows ?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so ?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear
 But cry'd, good seamen ! to the sailors, galling
 His kingly hands with hauling of the ropes ;
 And, clasping to the mast, endured a sea
 That almost burst the deck, and from the ladder-tackle

Wash'd off a canvass-climber ¶ : Ha ! says one,
Will out ? and, with a dropping industry,
 They skip from stem to stern : the boatswain
 whistles,

The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. And when was this ?

Mar. It was when I was born :
 Never was waves nor wind more violent.

Leon. Come, say your prayers speedily.

Mar. What mean you

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer
 I grant it : Pray ; but be not tedious,
 For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
 To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me ?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd ?

Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
 I never did her hurt in all my life ;
 I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
 To any living creature : believe me, la,
 I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly :
 I trod upon a worm against my will,
 But I wept for it. How have I offended,
 Wherein my death might yield her profit, or
 My life imply her danger ?

Leon. My commission

Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope. [show

 You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,

Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now:

Your lady seeks my life: come you between, And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn, And will despatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst MARINA is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain!

[LEONINE runs away.]

2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!

3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with MARINA.]

SCENE II. The same.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;

And they have seized Marina. Let her go: There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,

And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see further; Perhaps they will but please themselves upon Not carry her aboard. If she remain, [her, Whom they have ravish'd, must by me be slain.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Boul't.

Boul't. Sir.

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mytylene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creasures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think I have brought up some eleven—Boul't. Ay, to eleven, and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou say'st true; they are too unwholesome o'conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boul't. Ay, she quickly poop'd him; she made him roast-meat for worms:—but I'll go search the market.

[Exit BOULT.]

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the canger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd*. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods, will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling:—but here comes Boul't.

Enter the Pirates, and BOULT, dragging in MARINA.

Boul't. Come your ways. [To MARINA.]—My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.

Boul't. Master, I have gone thorough† for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul't, has she any qualities?

Boul't. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul't?

Boul't. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me; my masters; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pander and Pirates.]

Bawd. Boul't, take you the marks of her; the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, He that will give most, shall have her first. Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men wait as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boul't. Performance shall follow.

[Exit BOULT.]

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow!

[these pirates.]

(He should have struck, not spoke;) or that (Not enough barbarous,) had not overboard Thrown me, to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault,

To 'scape his hands, where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears!

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come,

* i. e., Half open.

† Bid a high price for her you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mur. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up.—Boults's returned.

Enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boults. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prythee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boults. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boults. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers • i' the hams?

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boults. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boults. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign?

Bawd. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me; you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do, makes pity in your lovers: Seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mur. I understand you not.

Boults. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of her's must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou say'st true, i' faith, so they must: for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boults. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— Bawd. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boults. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boults. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boults, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boults. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mur. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.

Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion.

I think

You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all the spacious I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady, [world, Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess To equal any single crown o' the earth,

If thou hadst drunk to him, it had been a kind Becoming well thy feat; what canst thou say, When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the To foster it, nor ever to preserve. [tates

She died by night; I'll say so. Who can cross Unless you play the impious innocent §, [it? And for an honest attribute, cry out,

She died by foul play.

Cle.

O, go to. Well, well, Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the god Do like this worst.

Dion.

Be one of those, that think The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,

And open this to Pericles. I do shame

To think of what a noble strain you are,

And of how cow'd a spirit.

Cle.

To such proceeding Who ever but his approbation added,

I thought not his pre-consent, he did not flow

From honourable courses.

Dion.

Be it so then:

Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.

She did disdain my child, and stood between

Her and her fortunes: None would look on

But cast their gazes on Marina's face; [her,

Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a malking],

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And even yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us.
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, doth wear an angel's face,
Seize with an eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one, that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods, that winter kills the flies;

But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.
Enter GOWK, before the Monument of MARINA at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have, and wish but for't;
Making, (to take your imagination,)

From bourn to bourn†, region to region.

By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language, in each several clime, Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you

To learn of me, who stand i'the gap to teach
The stages of our story. Pericles

Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
(Attended on by many a lord and knight,)

To see his daughter, all his life's delight.

Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late Advanced in time to great and high estate,

Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,

Old Helicanus goes along behind.

Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have brought

This king to Tharsus, (think his pilot
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,)

To fetch his daughter home, who first is Like motes and shadows see them move
awhile;

Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb Show.

Enter at one door, PERICLES with his Train; CLEON and DIONYZA at the other.
CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb of MA-RINA; whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then CLEON and DIONYZA retire.

Gow. See how belief may suffer by foul show!

This borrow'd passion stands for true old
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears
o'ershow'r'd,

Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs;
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears

A tempest, which his mortal vessels tears,

And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit!
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.

[Reads the inscription on MARINA'S Monument.

*The fairest, sweet'st, and best lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year.
She was of Tyrrus, the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter;*

*Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis†, being proud, swallow'd some part o'the earth:*

[flow'd,
Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'er-Hath Thetis birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:

[never stint.]
*Wherefore she does, (and swears she'll
Make raging battery upon shores of flint.
No visor does become black villany
So well as soft and tender flattery.*

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered

By lady fortune; while our scenes display
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,

In her unholy service. Patience then,
And think you now are all in Mitylen. [Exit.

SCENE V. Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the Brothel, Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1 Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?

2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses: shall we go hear the vestals sing?

1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is vir-tuous; but I am out of the road of rutting, for ever.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. The same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her; she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. 'Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfranchise us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me?

Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown,

Only.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now? How* a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity? Have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say, well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, pr'ythee?

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter MARINA.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never plucked yet, I can assure you. Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. 'Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you;—leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. First I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

[To MARINA, whom she takes aside.]

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and BOULT.]

Lys. Go thy way.—Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. What I cannot name but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester† at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in, proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else, look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place. Come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more?—be sage.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungente fortune Hath placed me here within this loathsome sty,

Where, since I came, diseases have been sold Dearer than physic,—O that the good gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest That flies i'the purer air! [bird]

Lys. I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee:

Perserver still in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten

That I came with no ill intent; for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely. Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble. Hold; here's more gold for thee.—

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou hears It shall be for thy good. [from me,

[As LYSIMACHUS is putting up his Purse, BOULT enters.]

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avant, thou damned door-keeper!

Your house, But for this virgin that doth prop it up, Would sink, and overwhelm you all. Away!

[Exit LYSIMACHUS.]

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the rope*, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your way. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures: away with her. Would she had never come within my doors! Marry hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays!

[Exit Bawd.]

Boult. Come, mistress; come your way with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Pr'ythee tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress. [thou art,

Mar. Neither of these are yet so bad as

Since they do better thee in their command. Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend

With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast; And I will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,

And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee; if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER.

Into an honest house, our story says.

She sings like one immortal, and she dances

As goddess-like to her admired lays:

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry;

That even her art sisters the natural roses:

Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry:

That pupils lacks she none of noble race,

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain

She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place;

For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so inflict on our province.—Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it;—
But see, I am prevented.

Enter, from the Barge, Lord, MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. A gallant lady.
Lys. She's such, that were I well assured
she came

Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:

Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous!

And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient;
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name Marina
Was given me by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn,
A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But now, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be;

You think me an impostor. No, good faith;
I am the daughter to king Pericles,
If good king Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general: Tell me, if thou canst,

She would sit still and weep.

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is Recover'd.

Thai. O, let me look!

If he be none of mine, my sanctity

Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,

But curb it spite of seeing. O, my lord,

Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak,

Like him you are: Did you not name a tem-

A birth, and death? [pest,

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead

And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.—

When we with tears parted Pentapolis,

The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

Per. This, this! no more, ye gods! your present kindness

Makes my past miseries sport. You shall do well,

That on the touching of her lips I may

Melt and no more be seen. O come, be buried

A second time within these arms.

Mar.

My heart

Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to THAISA.]

Per. Look, who kneels here? Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina, For she was yielded there.

Thai. Bless'd and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I left behind an ancient substitute.

Can you remember what I call'd the man?

I have named him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation:

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found;

How possibly preserved: and whom to thank,

Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir, The gods can have no mortal officer

More like a god than you. Will you deliver

How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord.

Beseech you, first go with me to my house, Where shall be shown you all was found with her;

How she came placed here within the temple; No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Diana!

I bless thee for thy vision, and will offer,

My night oblations to thee. Thaisa, [ter,

This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,

Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,

This ornament† that makes me look so dismal,

Will I, my loved Marina, clip to form;

And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,

To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there, my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves Will in that kingdom spend our following days;

Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,

To hear the rest untold.—Sir, lead the way.

Virtue preserved from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy

In Helicanus may you well descry
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears,
The worth that learned charity aye* wears.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn;
That him and his they in his palace burn.
The gods for murder seemed so content
To punish them; although not done, but meant.
So on your patience evermore attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.

That this tragedy has some merit, it were vain to deny; but that it is the entire composition of Shakspeare, is more than can be hastily granted. I shall not venture, with Dr. Farmer, to determine that the hand of our great poet is only visible in the last act, for I think it appears in several passages dispersed over each of these divisions. I find it difficult, however, to persuade myself that he was the original fabricator of the plot, or the author of every dialogue, chorus, &c.—STEEVENS.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us : but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most ; for equalities are so weighed, that curiosity * in neither can make choice of either's moiety †.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord ?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge : I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could : whereupon she grew round-wombed ; and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault ?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper ‡.

Glo. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account : though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair ; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund ?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent : remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.

I would not from your love make such a stray,

To match you where I hate; therefore beseech
you

To avert‡ your liking a more worthier way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is ashamed
Almost to acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange
That she, that even but now was your best object,

I'll do't before I speak,) that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath deprived me of your grace and favour;
But even for want of that, for which I am richer;
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue [it,
That I am glad I have not, though not to have
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou [me better.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is ; the observation we have made of it hath not been little : he always loved our sister most ; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age ; yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash ; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-ingrafted condition‡, but therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together : If our father carry autho-

Enter EDMUND, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess ; to thy law

Stand in the plague¶ of custom ; and permit
The curiosity¶ of nations to deprive me,

For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-

Lag of a brother ? Why bastard ? wherefore
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue ? Why brand they us
With base ? with baseness ? bastardy ? base, base ?
Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take
More composition and fierce quality,
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake ?—Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land :
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund,
As to the legitimate : Fine word,—legitimate !
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow ; I prosper :—

despatch of it into your pocket ? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself.
Let's see : Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me : it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read ; for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your over-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give
it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay§§ or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] *This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times ; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond||| bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny ; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered.

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I arst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, is heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord: But I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him:—Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where*, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour†, and to no other pretence‡ of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom; I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution§.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey|| the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent¶ effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund, it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully:—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange!

[Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity: fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of, succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts§§, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entre-ty, forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best: go armed; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, away.

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse§ with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight, when I cannot choose;
and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for anything: I have years on my back, forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner!—

Lear. Ha! sayst thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent; when I think your highness is wronged.

Lear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own conception; I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity*, than as a very pretence† and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

O, you sir, you sir, come you hither: Who am I, sir?

Stew. My lady's father.

Stew. I am none of this, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?

Stew. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither; you base football player.

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living‡, I'd keep my coxcombs myself: There's mine; be' another of thy daughters.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfeed lawyer: you gave me nothing for't: Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pry'thee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Come, place him here by me,—

Or do thou for him stand:

The other found out there.

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing in the middle: Here comes one o' the parings.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.
Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad; I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I; 'Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars to-ward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night;—'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed*: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. [Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy forbid thee, shall the duke instantly know; and of that letter too:—This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me that which my father loses; no less than all: The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.]

Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock's-hill;—
Hallow, hallow, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o'the foul fiend: Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not;
commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap*, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramoured the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand: Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women: Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says suum, mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy,
sessa; let him trot by. [Storm continues.]

Lear. Why, thou were better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncover'd body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool,
the cat no perfume:—Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself:
unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings:—Come, unbutton here†.

[Tearing off his clothes.] Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; this is a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart;
a small spark, all the rest of his body cold.—
Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet:
he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock;
he gives the web and the pin‡, squints the eye,
and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER, with a Torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets;
swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tything to tything††, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughters' hard commands;
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you;
Yet have I ventured to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is

SCENE V. A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reproveable badness in himself.

Edm. More malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! 'This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. A Chamber in a Farm-House adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience:—The gods reward your kindness! [Exit GLOSTER.

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent†, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son: for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning Come hissing in upon them:—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath. [straight:—

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer:—

Come o'er the bourns, Bessy, to me:—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come o'er to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herrings. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amazed:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robed man of justice, take thy place; [To EDGAR.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim [there!

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her Arms, arins, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place! False justicer, why hast thou let her scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience That you so oft have boasted to retain? [now,

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfeiting. [Aside.

Lear. The little dogs and all, [at me.

 cause in nature, that makes these hard hearts ?

 dred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: So, so, so: We'll go to supper

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.

 Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind:
 But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

 king bow;

EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed:—Seek out the villain Gloster. [Exeunt some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company; the revenges
 we are bound to take upon your traitorous father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation; we are bound to the like.

 us. Farewell, dear sister;—farewell, my lord his good wits: Bless the good man from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of Inst, as Obidicut; Hobbidance, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee,

Gon. I have been worth the whistle §.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,

Enter KENT, and a Gentleman.

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of;

Imports to the kingdom so much fear and
That his personal return was most required,
And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it moved her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief,
Would be a rarity most beloved, if all [sorrow
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?†

Gent. 'Faith, once, or twice, she heaved the name of father

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, *Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies!
sisters! [The night?*

Kent! father! sisters! What? 'Tis the storm?
Let pity not be believed!—There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd; then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. Well, sir; The poor distress'd Lear is

What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him:

Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot. [Lear,

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place:—stand still.—How fearful

And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low! The crows, and choughs*, that wing the mid-way air,

Show scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down Hangs one that gathers samphire†; dreadful trade!

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair, Is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods!

This world I do renounce; and, in your sights, Shake patiently my great affliction off:

If I could bear it longer, and not fall To quarrel with your great opposelless wills,

My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—No, fellow, fare thee well.

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed up with Flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect. There's your press-money: 'That fellow handles his bow like a crow keeper: draw me a clothier's §§ yard.—Look, look, a mouse! To say ay, and no, to every thing I said.—Ay and no too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o'th'ir words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof.

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life; what was thy cause?—
Adultery.

Thou shalt not die: Die for adultery! No:
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—
Behold yon simpering dame

Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;

The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't
With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above;

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fiend's: there's hell, there's darkness,

There is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—Fie, fie, fie! pah, pah!

Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report;—it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.
Glo. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?

Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: Yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yon' justice rails upon yon' simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand:
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly inst'st to use her in that kind

For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozeners.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes, and furr'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.

ACT V.

SCENE I. The Camp of the British Forces near Dover.

Enter, with Drums, and Colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose

You know the goodness I intend upon you:

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not:—

She, and the duke her husband,——

Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that my sister

Should loosen him and me. [Aside.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met.— Sir, this I hear,—The king is come to his daughter,

With others, whom the rigour of our state
Forced to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us, as France invades our land,
Not bolds‡ the king; with others, whom, I fear,
Must just and heavy causes make oppose§.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy:
For these domestic and particular broils
Are not to question here.

Alb. Let us then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us. [will go.

Gon. O, ho, I know the riddle: [Aside.] I
As they are going out, enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man
Hear me one word. [so poor,

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exit EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL,
Officers, Soldiers and Attendants.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion, that will prove
What is avouched there: If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases||. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again. [Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,
If both remain alive; To take the widow,

And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use His countenance for the battle; which being done,

Let her, who would be rid of him, devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.

SCENE II. A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with Drum and Colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, & their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOSTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may

I'll bring you comfort.

EDGAR.

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en:
Give me thy hand, come on.

SCENE III. The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in Conquest, with Drum & Colours,
EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, as Prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good

Until their greater pleasures first be known

We two alone will sing like birds i'the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,

And ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues

And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: And we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,

To send the old and miserable king

Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent

Yet am I noble as the adversary

Edg. Draw thy sword;
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,— Maugre† thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor:

And, from the extremest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, No,

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name‡;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some 'say§ of breeding breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,)

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets,

Gon. This is mere practice||, Gloster:
By the law of arms, thou wast not bound to

But cozen'd and beguiled.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it:—Hold, sir:—
Thou worse than any name, read thine own

No tearing, lady: I perceive, you know it.

Gon. Say, if I do; the laws are mine, not thine:
Who shall arraign me for't?

Alb. Most monstrous!

Gon. Ask me not what I know.

her. [To an Officer, who goes out.

A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee;

|| Poor fool, in the time of Shakspeare, was an expression of endearment.

¶ Die.

The tragedy of Lear is deservedly celebrated among the dramas of Shakspeare. There is perhaps no play which keeps the attention so strongly fixed; which so much agitates our passions, and interests our curiosity. The artful involutions of distinct interests, the striking oppositions of contrary characters, the sudden changes of fortune, and the quick succession of events, fill the mind with a perpetual tumult of indignation, pity, and hope. There is no scene which does not contribute to the aggravation of the distress or conduct of the action, and scarce a line which does not conduce to the progress of the scene. So powerful is the current of the poet's imagination, that the mind, which once ventures within it, is hurried irresistibly along.

On the seeming improbability of Lear's conduct, it may be observed, that he is represented according to histories at that time vulgarly received as true. And, perhaps, if we turn our thoughts upon the barbarity and ignorance of the age to which this story is referred, it will appear not so unlikely as while we estimate Lear's manners by our own. Such preference of one daughter to another, or resignation of dominion on such conditions, would be yet credible, if told of a petty prince of Guinea or Madagascar. Shakspeare, indeed, by the mention of his earls and dukes, has given us the idea of times more civilized, and of life regulated by softer manners; and the truth is, that though he so nicely discriminates, and so minutely describes the characters of men, he commonly neglects and confounds the characters of ages, by mingling customs ancient and modern, English and foreign.

My learned friend, Mr. Warton*, who has, in THE ADVENTURER, very minutely criticised this play, remarks, that the instances of cruelty are too savage and shocking, and that the intervention of Edmund destroys the simplicity of the story. These objections may, I think, be answered by repeating, that the cruelty of the daughters is an historical fact, to which the poet has added little, having only drawn it into a series of dialogue and action. But I am not able to apologize with equal plausibility for the extrusion of Gloucester's eyes, which seems an act too horrid to be endured in dramatic exhibition, and such as must always compel the mind to relieve its distress by incredulity. Yet let it be remembered, that our author well knew what would please the audience for which he wrote.

The injury done by Edmund to the simplicity of the action, is abundantly recompensed by the addition of variety, by the art with which he is made to co-operate with the chief design, and the opportunity which he gives the poet of combining perfidy with perfidy, and connecting the wicked son with the wicked daughters, to impress this important moral, that villainy is never at a stop, that crimes lead to crimes, and at last terminate in ruin.

But though this moral be incidentally enforced, Shakspeare has suffered the virtue of Cordelia to perish in a just cause, contrary to the natural ideas of justice, to the hope of the reader, and what is yet more strange, to the faith of chronicle. Yet this conduct is justified by THE SPECTATOR, who blames Tate for giving Cordelia success and happiness in his alteration, and declares, that in his opinion, "the tragedy has lost half its beauty." Dennis has remarked, whether justly or not, that, to secure the favourable reception of "Cato, the town was poisoned with much false and abominable criticism," and that endeavours had been used to discredit and decry poetical justice. A play in which the wicked prosper, and the virtuous miscarry, may doubtless be good, because it is a just representation of the common events of human life: but since all reasonable beings naturally love justice, I cannot easily be persuaded, that the observation of justice makes a play worse; or that if other excellencies are equal, the audience will not always rise better pleased from the final triumph of persecuted virtue.

In the present case, the public has decided. Cordelia, from the time of Tate, has always retired with victory and felicity. And, if my sensations could add any thing to the general suffrage, I might relate, I was many years ago so shocked by Cordelia's death, that I know not whether I ever endured to read again the last scenes of the play till I undertook to revise them as an editor.

There is another controversy among the critics concerning this play. It is disputed whether the predominant image in Lear's disordered mind be the loss of his kingdom, or the cruelty of his daughters. Mr Murphy, a very judicious critic, has evinced by induction of particular passages, that the cruelty of his daughters is the primary source of his distress, and that the loss of royalty affects him only as a secondary and subordinate evil. He observes, with great justness, that Lear would move our compassion but little, did we not rather consider the injured father than the degraded king.

The story of this play, except the episode of Edmund, which is derived, I think, from Sidney, is taken originally from Geoffry of Monmouth, whom Holingshed generally copied; but perhaps immediately from an old historical ballad. My reason for believing that the play was posterior to the ballad, rather than the ballad to the play, is, that the ballad has nothing of Shakspeare's nocturnal tempest, which is too striking to have been omitted, and that it follows the chronicle; it has the rudiments of the play, but none of its amplifications: it first hinted Lear's madness, but did not array it in circumstances. The writer of the ballad added something to the history, which is a proof that he would have added more, if more had occurred to his mind, and more must have occurred if he had seen Shakspeare.

JOHNSON.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
 In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
 From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
 Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
 From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
 A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life ;
 Whose misadventured piteous overthrows
 Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
 And the continuance of their parents' rage,
 Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
 Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage ;
 The which if you with patient ears attend,
 What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I. A public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o'my word we'll not carry coals*.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move, is—to stir ; and to be valiant, is—to stand to it : therefore, if thou art moved, thou runn'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand : I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave ; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True ; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall : therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant : when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids ; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids ?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads ; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand : and, 'tis known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish ; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John†. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues*.

Enter ABRAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How? turn thy back and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown, as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Marry, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say,—ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter BENVOLIO, at a distance.

Gre. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do.

[Beats down their Swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What! art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn and talk of peace? I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:

Have at thee, coward. [They fight.]

Enter several Partisans of both Houses, who join the Fray; then enter Citizens, with Clubs.

1 Cit. Clubs! bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his Gown; and Lady CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this!—Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you

Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is and flourishes his blade in spite of me. [come.]

Enter MONTAGUE and Lady MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet.—Hold me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—Will they not hear?—what ho! you men, you beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins, On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince.—

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,

By thee, old Capulet and Montague,

Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;

And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments,

To wield old partisans, in hands as old,

Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd

If ever you disturb our streets again, [hate:]

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.

For this time, all the rest depart away:

You, Capulet, shall go along with me;

And, Montague, come you this afternoon,

To know our further pleasure in this case, [place,

To old Free-town, our common judgment.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

Citizens, and Servants. [abroach.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:

I drew to part them; in the instant came

The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepared;

Which, as he breathed defiance to my ears,

He swung about his head, and cut the winds,

Who nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn:

While we were interchanging thrusts and blows, [part,

Came more and more, and fought on part and

Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo!—saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am, he was not at this fray. [sun

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,

A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;

Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore,

That westward rooteth from the city's side,—

So early walking did I see your son:

Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,

And stole into the covert of the wood:

I, measuring his affections by my own,—

That most are busied when they are most

Pursued my humour, not pursuing his, [alone,—

And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been

The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of

Ben. Have you importuned him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself and many other
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself,—I will not say how true—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun. [grow,
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter ROMEO, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you, step aside;

I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,

To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt MONTAGUE and Lady.]

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new-struck nine.

Rom. Ah me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went thence so fast?

Ben. It was.—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which having, makes

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,

Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!
Where shall we dine?—O me!—What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:—

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!

O any thing, of nothing first create!

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!—

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.—

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest
With more of thine: this love, that thou has shown, [own.

Doth add more grief to too much of mine.
Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs;
Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers'
tears:

What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz. [Going.

Ben. Soft, I will go along;
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness*, who she is you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

Ben. Groan? why, no;
But sadly tell me, who. [will.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I supposed you loved.

Rom. A right good marksman!—And she's

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit. [be hit

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not
With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives un-harm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:
O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;

For beauty, starved with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love; and, at that vow,
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be ruled by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way
To call her's, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies'
brows,

Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;
He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read, who pass'd that passin' fair?

Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. [Exeunt.]

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here? It is written—that the shoe-maker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;

Take thou some new infection to thy eye, And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:

Serv. God gi' good e'en.—I pray, sir, can you read?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book:

But I pray, can you read any thing you see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly; Rest you merry!

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. [Reads.

Nurse. Now, by my maiden-head,—at

I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady—
God forbid!—where's this girl?—what, Juliet!

Jul. How now, who calls?

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet, to my teen† be it spoken, I have but

She is not fourteen: How long is it now
To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, [teen.

Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be four—
Susan and she,—God rest all Christian souls!
Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God;

She was too good for me: But, as I said,
On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen;
That shall she, marry; I remember it well.

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,

Of all the days of the year, upon that day:
For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall,
My lord and you were then at Mantua:—

Nay, I do bear a brain‡:—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool!
To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug.

Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need,
To bid me trudge. [I trow,

And since that time it is eleven years;
For then she could stand alone; nay, by the

She could have run and waddled all about.

For even the day before, she broke her brow:
And then my husband—God be with his soul!

'A was a merry man;—took up the child:
Yea, quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face?

Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast
more wit;

Wilt thou not, Jule? and by my holy-dam
The pretty wretch left crying, and said—Ay:
To see now, how a jest shall come about!

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it; Wilt thou not, Jule?

And, pretty fool, it stinted ¶, and said—Ay.

thy peace. [but laugh,

Nurse. Yes, madam; Yet I cannot choose
To think it should leave crying, and say—Ay:

And yet, I warrant, it had upon it's brow

A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly.
Yea, quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face? [to age,

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed:

An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme

I came to talk of:—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and Others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity*:
We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper†;
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance:

But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure‡, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch§,—I am not for this Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Rom. Not I, believe me; you have dancing
With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead
So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,

And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft,

To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:

Under love's heavy burden do I sink. [love;

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Too rude, too boist'rous; and it pricks like

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons, light

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay

Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

things true. [with you.

Mer. O, then I see queen Mab hath been
She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agate-stone

On the fore-finger of an alderman,

Drawn with a team of little atomies††

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep: [legs;

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners'

The cover of the wings of grasshoppers;

The traces, of the smallest spider's web;

The collars, of the moonshine's wat'ry beams:

Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film:

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,

Not half so big as a round little worm

Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,

Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,

Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.

And in this state she gallops night by night

Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love: [straight:

On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees:

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;

Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,

Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are,

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace;
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams;
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of, blows us from ourselves;

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives,
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, closed in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death:
But He, that bath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. A Hall in Capulet's House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard †, look to the plate:—good thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan asked for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—
Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.

[Music plays, and they dance.

More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.
Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, nay sit, good cousin Capulet;
For you and I are past our dancing days:
How long is't now, since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;

A villain, that is hither come in spite,

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,

Therefore be patient, take no note of him,

It is my will; the which if thou respect,

what.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house,

I nursed her daughter, that you talk'd withal;

I tell you,—he, that can lay hold of her,

Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

I Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;

We have a trifling foolish banquet† towards.—
Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:—
More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, [To 2 Cap.] by my fay$, it waxes late;

I'll to my rest.

[Exeunt all but JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is you gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

door? [truchio.

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Pe-

Nurse. Anon, anon:—
Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone.

Enter CHORUS.

Now old Desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young Affection gapes to be his heir;

That fair, which love groan'd for, and would
die,

With tender Juliet match'd is now not fair.
Now Romeo is beloved, and loves again,

Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe supposed he must complain,

And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;

And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-beloved any where:

But passion lends them power, time means to meet,

Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is here?

Turn back, dull earth*, and find thy centre out.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin, Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,

When king Cophetua loved the beggar-maid†.—

He heareth not, stirreth not, he moveth not;

The ape‡ is dead, and I must conjure him.—

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,

By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,

By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,

That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain

To seek him here, that means not to be found.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—

[JULIET appears above, at a Window.]

But, soft! what light through yonder window

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!—[breaks]

Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,

Who is already sick and pale with grief,

That thou her maid art far more fair than she.

He not her maid †, since she is envious;

Her vestal livery is but sick and green,

And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—

It is my lady: O, it is my love:

O, that she knew she were!— [that?]

She speaks, yet she says nothing: What of

Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:

Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,

Having some business, do entreat her eyes

To twinkle in their spheres till they return,

What if her eyes were there, they in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame

those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright,

That birds would sing, and think it were not

night.

See how she leans her cheek upon her hand!

O, that I were a glove upon that hand,

That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!

Rom. She speaks:—

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art

As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,

As is a winged messenger of heaven

Unto the white upturned wond'ring eyes

Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him.

When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,

And sails upon the bosom of the air. [Romeo†

Jul. O, Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:

Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,

And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this? [aside.

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;

Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.

What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,

Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part

Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!

What's in a name? that which we call a rose,

By any other name would smell as sweet;

So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,

Retain that dear perfection which he owes †,

Without that title.—Romeo, doff thy name;

And for that name, which is no part of thee,

Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:

Call me but love, and I'll be new baptized;

Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou that, thus, be screen'd in night,

So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am:

† i.e., Himself. † Alluding to the old ballad of the king and the beggar. † This phrase, in Shakspeare's time, was used as an expression of tenderness. § Humid, moist.

Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say—Ay;
And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou may'st prove false; at lover's perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love pronounce it faithfully:

Or, if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but else not for the world.

That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon

That monthly changes in her circled orb,

Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in
I have no joy of this contract to-night: [thee,
It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be

My love as deep; the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite.

Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

SCENE III. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, with a Basket.

Fri. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night, [light;
Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of
And flecked† darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's§ wheels:

Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must fill up this osier cage of ours, [ers.
With baleful weeds, and precious juiced flow-
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
What is her burying grave, that is her womb:
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find;
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace||, that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but strain'd from that fair
use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence, and medicine power:

For this, being smelt, with that part cheers
each part;

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?—
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain [reign:

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-roused by some distemp'rance;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine. [line?

Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosa-

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe. [drift;

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine; [bine
And all combined, save what thou must com-
By holy marriage: when, and where, and how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us this day. [here!

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!

The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans wring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:

If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou changed? pronounce this sentence then— [men.

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

To lay one in, another out to have. [love now,
Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I
Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well,
Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste*.

Fri. Wisely, and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead!
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft†: And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats‡, I can tell you. O, he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song§, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house,—of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay||.

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents!—
*By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good whore!—*Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-moy's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons¶!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring:—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!
—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to his lady, was but a kitchen-wench;—marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots;
Thisbé, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night,

Rom. Good-morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip††; Can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and, in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to court'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump‡‡ well flowered.

Mer. Well said: Follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-soled§§ jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio;
my wits fail.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs;
or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-geese chase|||, I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-geese in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweetening¶¶;
it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheverel, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad:
which, added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling

love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceived, I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale: and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly geer!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon?

Nurse. My fan, Peter*.

Mer. Prythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den†, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick‡ of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;—For himself to mar, quoth'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for 'fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took, i'faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

An old hare hoar,

And an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in Lent:

But a hare that is hoar,

Is too much for a score,

When it hours ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady||, lady.

[Exit MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Nurse. Marry farewell!—I pray you, sir, what sancy merchant¶ was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me, I'll take him down an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates††:—And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee.—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i'faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentleman-like offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come This afternoon; [to shrift††]

And there she shall at friar Laurence's cell Be shrived, and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee; And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair Which to the high top-gallant§§ of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night. Farewell!—Be trusty, and I'll quit||| thy pains. Farewell! commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say—

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O,—there's a nobleman in Doth not rosemary and Romeo beg in both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R. is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she hath the prettiest sententions of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

SCENE V. Capulet's Garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promised to return. [so.—
Perchance, she cannot meet him; that's not O, she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts, [beams,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's
Driving back shadows over low'ring hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours,—yet she is not come.
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy* her to my sweet love,
And his to me:

But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God, she comes!—O honey nurse, what news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.
Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate.

[Exit PETER.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou shalt amend the music of sweet news
By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am weary, give me leave a while:
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had!

[thy news:

Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

[awhile?

Nurse. Jesu. What haste? can you not stay?
Do you not see, that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me—that thou art out of breath?

The excuse, that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:

Let me be satisfied, Is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, nor he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench; serve God.—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before.
What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head akes! what a head have I?

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o't'other side,—O, my back, my back!
Beshrew't your heart, for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I faith, I am sorry that thou art not well: [my love?

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,

And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is Where should she be? How oddly thou reply'st?

*Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?*

Nurse. O, God's lady dear!

Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;

Is this the poultrie for my aking bones?

Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil,—come, what says Romeo?

[to-day?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift?

Jul. I have. [hence' cell,

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Lau

There stays a husband to make you a wife:

Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news
Hie you to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love

Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark:
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight;
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.

Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune!—honest nurse,

farewell.

[Exit.

SCENE VI. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!

* Drive her, as a ball struck with a bandy, i. e., a bat or battledore.

† Ill bodie.

‡ Noise, bustle.

Rom. Amen! amen! but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,

Then love-devouring death do what he dare,
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends, [powder,
And in their triumph die; like fire and
Which, as they kiss, consume: The sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite:
Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady: O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossomers*
That idle in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.
Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both!

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks
Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more

To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue,

Unfold the imagined happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,

Braggs of his substance, not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their worth;
But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. A public Place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire;
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern,
claps me his sword upon the table, and says,
God send me no need of thee! and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes; What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, for quarrelling.
Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter TYBALT, and Others.

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.—Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us?
Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You will find me apt enough to that,
sir, if you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo,
Mer. Consort? what, dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddle-stick; here's that shall make you dance.
'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Either withdraw into some private place,
Or reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man. [your livery:]

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford

No better term than this—Thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage

To such a greeting:—Villain am I none;

Therefore farewell; I see, thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries that thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never injured thee; But love thee better than thou canst devise, Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied. [sion]

Mer. O, calm, dishonourable, vile submission! *A la stoccata carries it away. [Draws.]

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal; and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher† by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.]

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; [shame]

Beat down their weapons.—Gentlemen, for forbear this outrage. Tybalt—Mercutio—The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying [cutio.]

In Verona streets:—hold, Tybalt; good Mer- [Exeunt TYBALT and his Partisans.]

Mer. I am hurt;—

A plague o'both the houses!—I am sped.—Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt!

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch: marry, 'tis enough.—

Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.]

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world:—A plague o'both your houses!—Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint.—A plague o'both your houses! 'they have made worms' meat of me:

I have it, and soundly too:—Your houses!

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander,—Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman:—O, sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper softened valour's steel.

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio is dead;

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more day doth depend,

This but begins the woe, others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again. [slain!]

Rom. Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort Shalt with him hence. [him here!]

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; TYBALT falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain: Stand not amazed:—the prince will doom thee death,

If thou art taken:—hence!—be gone!—away!

Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit ROMEO.]

Enter Citizens, &c.

1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1 Cit. Up, sir, go with me; I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and Others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl: There lies the man slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child!

Unhappy sight! ah me, the blood is spill'd! Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true †,

With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold, friends! friends, part! and, swifter
than his tongue,

His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm

An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio; and then Tybalt fled:
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning; for, ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt

Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:

And all those twenty could but kill one life:

I will be deaf to pleading and excuses; [abuses,

SCENE II. A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phœbus' mansion; such a waggoner
As Phæton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.—
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!

That run-away's eyes may wink; and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseen!
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties; or, if love be blind,

It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night,
Thou sober suited matron all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods:
Hood my unmann'd blood bating in my cheeks, [grown bold,
With thy black mantle; till strange love,
Think true love acted, simple modesty.
Come, night!—Come, Romeo! come, thou

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—
Come, gentle night; come, loving, blackbrow'd night,

Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd it: So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival

And may not wear them. O, here comes my me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I!
And that bare vowel I shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I!
If he be slain, say—I; or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my weal, or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine

God save the mark!—here on his manly
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaw'd in blood,
All in gore blood; I swoonded at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes! ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

* Punish by fine. † Grave, solemn. ‡ These are terms of falconry. § Gaudy, showy necessary to retain the old spelling.

That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this, that blows so contrary?

Is Romeo slaughter'd; and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-loved cousin, and my dearer lord?—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed
Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? [face]
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather'd raven! volkish-ravens lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!

Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!—

When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend

In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?

Was ever book, containing such vile matter,

So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell

In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,

No faith, no honesty in men; all perjured,

All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—

Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,

For such a wish! he was not born to shame:

Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit;

For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that

Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's

death,

That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;

But, O! it presses to my memory,

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:

Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;

That—banished, that one word—banished,

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts†. Tybalt's

Was woe enough, if it had ended there:

Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,

All slain, all dead:—Romeo is banished,—

In that word's death; no words can that woe

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment,

Take up those cords:—Poor ropes, you are beguiled,

Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd:

He made you for a highway to my bed;

But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.

Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed;

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find

Romeo

To comfort you:—I wot§ well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;

I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true

knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell.

SCENE III. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,

And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,

That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company:

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom? [lips

Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—

For exile hath more terror in his look, [death:

Much more than death; do not say—banishment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:

Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

* To smooth, in ancient language, is to stroke, to caress.

† i. e., Is worse than the loss of ten thousand Tybalts.

‡ Common.

§ Know.

Rom. There is no world without Verona
But purgatory, torture, hell itself. [walls,
Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then banishment
Is death mis-term'd: calling death—banish-
ment,

Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smilest upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banish-
ment:

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,

Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not.—More validity*,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin.
But Romeo may not; he is banished:
Flies may do this, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.
And say't thou yet, that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground
knife,

[mean,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so
But—banished—to kill me; banished?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word—banishment?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word. [ment.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banish-
Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Fri. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speak, then might'st thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

Fri. Arise; one knocks: good Romeo, hide thyself. [Knocking within.]

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,

Mist-læ, unfold me from the search of eyes.

[Knocking

Fri. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there
—Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while: stand up.

[Knocking

Run to my study:—By and by:—God's will!
What wilfulness is this?—I come, I come.

[Knocking

Who knocks so hard? whence come you?
what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;

I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Nurse. Enter Nurse.
O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. O woful sympathy!

Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blub-bering:—

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—Well, death's the end of all. [her?

Rom. Spakest thou of Juliet? how is it with Doth she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood reioined but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love? [says

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then-on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,

Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman.—O tell me, friar; tell
In what vile part of this anatomy [me,

Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his Sword.

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;

Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
Or ill-beseeming beast, in seeming both!

Thou hast amazed me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,

By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three

And thou dismember'd with thine own de-

But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;

Or by the break of day disguised from hence:

SCENE IV. A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter: [ly,

Look you, she loved her kinsman Tybalt dear-
And so did I;—Well, we were born to die.—
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago. [woo:

Par. These times of woe afford no time to Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter. [to-morrow;

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early
To-night she's mew'd† up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate§

In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;

Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,

O' Thursday let it be;—O' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl:—
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We'll keep no great ado;—a friend, or two:—
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much:
Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday? [to-morrow.

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were

Afore me, it is so very late, that we May call it early by and by:—Good night.

SCENE V. Juliet's Chamber.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near
It was the nightingale, and not the lark [day:
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious
streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain-tops;
I must be gone, and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not day-light, I know it, I:
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:

† The whole of your fortune depends on this § Bold.

Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death; I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

I'll say, yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow*;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay, than will to go;—
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.—
How is't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, hie hence, be gone, away;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps
Some say, the lark makes sweet division†;
This doth not so, for she divideth us: [eyes:
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change
O, now I would they had changed voices too!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up‡ to the day,
O, now begone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light?—more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse?

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your chamber:

The day is broke; be wary, look about.

[Exit Nurse.]

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend. [ROMEO descends.]

Jul. Art thou gone so? my love! my lord! my friend!

I must hear from thee every day i' the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou, we shall ever meet again? [serve

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul:
Methinks, I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb:
Either my eye-sight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!

[Exit ROMEO.]

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle:

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long.
But send him back. [up?

La. Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you

Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady mo-
Is she not down so late, or up so early? [ther?
What anon custom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?

Jul.

Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death? [tears?

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with

Therefore, have done: Some griefs shows much
But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not
Which you weep for. [the friend

Jul.

Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughtered him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder.
God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor mur-derer lives. [hands.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my Would, none but I might venge my cousin's death! [thou not:

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear
Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,—

Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,—
That shall bestow on him so sure a draught,
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd:—
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it;
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet.—O, how my heart abhors
To hear him named,—and cannot come to him,—

To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But, now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl. [time:

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;

One, who to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that? [day morn,

Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.
I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris;—These are news indeed!

La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself.

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle
But for the sunset of my brother's son, [dew;
It rains downright.—

How now! a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
Ever more showering? In one little body
Thou counterfeist a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,

Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;
Who,—racing with thy tears, and they with
Without a sudden calm, will overset [them,—
Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife?
Have you delivered to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife. [thanks?

Hew! will she none? doth she not give us
Is she not proud? doth she not count her
bless'd,

Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom!

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:

Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now! how now, chop-logick!
What is this? [not;—

Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you
And yet not proud;—Mistress minion, you Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds, [next,

But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.

Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you
You tallow face! [baggage!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage; disobedient wretch! [day,

I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thurs-
Or never after look me in the face:

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me:
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us
bless'd,

That God had sent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her, hilding! *

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!—
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,

Good prudence; snatter with your gossips

Nurse. I speak no treason. [go.

Cap. O, God ye good den!

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,

For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad: Day night, late, early,

At home, abroad, alone, in company,

Waking, or sleeping, still my care hath been

To have her match'd: and having now provided

A gentleman of princely parentage,

Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd (as they say,) with honourable parts,

Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,

And then to have a wretched puling fool,

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,

To answer—I'll not wed,—I cannot love,

I am too young,—I pray you, pardon me;

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you:

Graze where you will, you shall not house
with me;

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i'the streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,

Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:

Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!

Delay this marriage for a month, a week;

Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed

In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak
a word;

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be

Is banish'd; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge

you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.

Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,

I think it best you married with the county.

O, he's a lovely gentleman!

Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,

As Paris hath. Peshrew my very heart,

I think you are happy in this second match,

For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here, and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. From my soul too;
Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. To what?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeased my father, to Laurence' cell,
To make confession, and to be absolved.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done. [Exit.]

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!

Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath praised him with above compare

So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor,
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.

Fri. You say, you do not know the lady's Uneven is the course, I like it not. [mind.]

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's
And therefore have I little talk'd of love; [death,
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway;
And, in his wisdom, hastens our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears;

Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society:

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd. [Aside.]

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife!

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday.

Jul. What must be shall be. [day next.]

Fri. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father?

Jul. To answer that, were to confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.

Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price, [me.
Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abused with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;
For it was bad enough, before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, that is a truth;
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—
Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
Or shall I come to you to evening mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter,
now:—

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss. [Exit PARIS.]

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so, [past help!]

Come weep with me; Past hope, past cure,

Fri. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;
It strains me past the compass of my wits:
I hear thou must, and nothing must progue it,
On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.
God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed,
Or my true heart with treacherous revolt,
Turn to another, this shall slay them both:
Therefore, out of thy long-experienced time,
Give me some present counsel; or, behold,
'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire*; arbitrating that
Which the commission† of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,
Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry county Paris,
Thou hadst the strength of will to slay thyself
Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to scape from
And, if thou darest, I'll give thee remedy. [it;]

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring
bears;

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house, [bones,
O'er cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
With reeky shanks and yellow chapless skulls]

* Decide the struggle between me and my distresses.

† Authority or power.

Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me
tremble;

And I will do it without fear or doubt.
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. Hold, then; go home, be marry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow:
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber: Take thou this phial, being then in bed; [ber:
And this distilled liquor drink thou off:
When, presently, through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humor, which shall seize Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep
His natural progress, but surcease to beat:
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pale ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, deprived of supple government,
Shall stiff, and stark, and cold, appear like
death:

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk
Thou shalt remain full two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
Then (as the manner of our country is,)
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
And hither shall he come; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present
shame;

If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, O give me! tell me not of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and
In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father! [Exit.

SCENE II. A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, Nurse, and Servant.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.— [Exit Servant.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.— [Exit Servant.
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.

What, is my daughter gone to friar Lawrence?
Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good
A peevish self-will'd harlot y it is. [ou her:
Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift* with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you been gadding? [sin

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the
Of disobedient opposition

To you, and your behests; and am enjoin'd
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here.

And, beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech
Henceforward I am ever ruled by you. [you;

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this;

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's cell,
And gave him what becometh love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well,—
stand up:

This is as't should be.—Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—

Now, afore God, this rev'rend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments

As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough. [church to-morrow.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her:—we'll to [Exit JULIET and Nurse.

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision;
'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her; [wife:
I'll not to bed to-night;—let me alone;

I'll play the housewife for this once. What, ho!—
They are all forth: Well, I will walk myself

To county Paris, to prepare him up [light,
Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.

[Exit.

SCENE III. Juliet's Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, gentle
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night; [nurse,
For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full o'

sin.

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy? do you need my help? [cessaries

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such ne
As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:

So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you;

For, I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night!

* Confession.

† Commands.

‡ Becoming.

§ Prayers.

Get thee to bed, with rest: for thou hast need.

[Ereunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life:

I'll call them back again to comfort me;—

Nurse!—What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—

Come, phial.—

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Must I of force be married to the county?—

No, no; this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.—

[Laying down a dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar

Subtly have minister'd to have me dead;

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man:

I will not entertain so bad a thought.—

How if, when I am laid into the tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?

Or, if I live, is it not very like,

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place,—

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,

Where, for these many hundred years, the

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd; [bones

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,

Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort;—

Alack, alack! is it not like, that I,

So early waking,—what with loathsome smells,

And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad* ;—

O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,

Environed with all these hideous fears?

And madly play with my forefathers' joints?

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,

As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?

O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost

Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body

Upon a rapier's point:—Stay, Tybalt, stay!—

Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the Bed.

SCENE IV. Capulet's Hall.

Enter Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry †.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock bath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:

Look to the baked meats, good Angelica:

Spare not for cost.

Nurse.

Go, go, you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed; 'faith you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt
in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

Ereunt Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now,
What's there? [fellow,

Enter Servants, with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]

—Sirrah, fetch drier logs;

Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs.

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.

Cap. 'Mass, and well said; a merry whore-son! ha, [day:

Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'tis
The county will be here with music straight,

[Music within.

For so he said he would. I hear him near:—

Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;

I'll go and chat with Paris:—Hie, make haste,

Make haste! the bridegroom he is come already:

Make haste, I say!

[Ereunt.

SCENE V. Juliet's Chamber. JULIET on the Bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!
—fast, I warrant her, she:—

Why, lamb!—why, lady!—fie, you slug-a-bed!— [why, bride!—

Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—
What, not a word?—you take your pennyworths now;

[rant,
Sleep for a week: for the next night, I war-

The county Paris hath set up his rest,

That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,

(Marry and amen!) how sound is she asleep!

I needs must wake her:—Madam, madam,
madam!

Ay, let the county take you in your bed;

He'll fright you up, 'faith.—Will it not be?
What, drest! and in your clothes! and down
again?

I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady!
Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—

O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!

Some aqua-vitæ, ho!—my lord! my lady!

* The fabulous accounts of the plant called a mandrake give it a degree of animal life, and when it is torn from the ground it groans, which is fatal to him that pulls it up. † Distracted.
The room where pies were made. § Mouse was a term of endearment to a woman

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—
Help, help!—call help!

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come. [alack the day!]

Nurse. She's dead, deceased, she's dead;

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead. [cold;]

Cap. Ha! let me see her:—Out, alas! she's
Her blood is settled; and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Accursed time! unfortunate old man!

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS, with Musicians. [church?]

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:

O son, the night before thy wedding-day

Hath death lain with thy bride:—See, there

Flower as she was, deflowered by him. [she lies,

Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;

My daughter he hath wedded! I will die,

And leave him all; life leaving, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accursed, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw

In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,

But one thing to rejoice and solace in,

And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O wo! O woful, woful, woful day!

Most lamentable day! most woful day.

That ever, ever, I did yet behold!

O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!

Never was seen so black a day as this:

O woful day! O woful day!

Par. Beguiled, divorced, wronged, spited,

Most detestable death, by thee beguiled, [slain!]

By cruel, cruel thee quite overthrown!—

O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despised, distressed, hated, martyr'd,
kill'd!—

Uncomfortable time! why camest thou now

To murder, murder our solemnity?—

O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!

Dead art thou, dead!—Alack! my child is dead;

And, with my child, my joys are buried!

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath
And all the better is it for the maid: [all,
Your part in her you could not keep from
death;

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion;
For 'twas your heaven, she should be advanc'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanced,
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself!

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married, that lives married long
But she's best married, that dies married young
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church:
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments, to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns, to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with
And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare [him:—
To follow this fair corse unto her grave:
The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will. [Exit CAPULET, Lady

CAPULET, PARIS, and Friar.

1 Mus. 'Faith we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up; put
For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. [up;
[Exit Nurse.

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's ease, heart's ease; O, an you will have me live,
play—heart's ease.

1 Mus. Why heart's ease?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays—My heart is full of woe: O, play me some merry dump*, to comfort me.

2 Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play
now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith; but the

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets:
I'll re you, I'll fa you; Do you note me?

1 Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit; I will

And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound;*

Why, silver sound? why, music with her silver sound?

What say you, Simon Catling?

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck*?

2 Mus. I say—silver sound, because musical sound ~~for~~ silver.

Pet. Pretty too!—What say you, James Soundpost?

3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer: I will say for you. It is—music with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have seldom gold for sounding:—

*Then music with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth lend redress.*

[Exit, singing.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same?

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord[†] sits lightly in his throne;
And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead;
(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think,)

And breathed such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter BALTHASAR.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well. [ill]

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be
Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. Pardon me, sir, I will not leave you thus:

Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceived;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit BALTHASAR.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means.—O, mischief: thou art swift

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!

I do remember an apothecary,—

And hereabouts he dwells,—whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said—
And if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O, this same thought did but fore-run my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man.—I see that thou art poor;

Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding geer[§]
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharged of breath
As violently, as hasty powder fired
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb. [law]

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's
Is death, to any he that utters them. [edness,

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretch-
And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery, [law]
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.

Ap. Pnt this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls,

* "And the jocund rebecks sound."—MILTON. † i. e., Love. ‡ Herbs. § Stuff.

Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st
not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison; go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar JOHN.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Law. This same should be the voice of friar John.—

Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

John. Going to find a barefoot brother out,
One of our order to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Law. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

John. I could not send it—here it is again,—
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Law. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice*, but full of charge,
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.]

Law. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within these three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, closed in a dead man's tomb!

[Exit.]

SCENE III. A Church-Yard; in it a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing Flowers and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand aloof;—

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread,
(Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,)
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the church-yard; yet I will adventure.

[Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed:

Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit doth contain
The perfect model of eternity;

* i. e., On a trivial or idle subject.

Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
Accept this latest favour at my hands;
That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb!

[The Boy whistles

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies, and true-love's rites?
What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, a while.

[Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR with a Torch, Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: Upon thy life I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is, partly, to behold my lady's face: [finger
But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead
A precious ring; a ring that I must use
In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:—

But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint
And strew this hungry church-yard with thy limbs:

The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—
Take thou that: [fellow.

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good
Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of
death,
Gorged with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Breaking open the Door of the Monument.

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague, [grief,

That murder'd my love's cousin;—with which
It is supposed the fair creature died,—
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.

[Advances.

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague;
Can vengeance be pursued further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.—

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these
gone;

† i. e., Action of importance.

Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth.
 Heap not another sin upon my head,
 By arguing me to fury:—O, be gone!
 By heaven, I love thee better than myself:
 For I come hither arm'd against myself:
 Stay not, begone;—live, and hereafter say—
 A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations*,
 And do attach thee as a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy. [They fight.]

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch. [Exit Page.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.]—If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. If faith, I will:—Let me peruse this face;—

Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris:—
 What said my man, when my betossed soul
 Did not attend him as we rode? I think,
 He told me, Paris should have married Juliet:
 Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
 Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
 To think it was so?—O give me thy hand,
 One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
 I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave.—
 A grave? O, no; a lantern†, slaughter'd youth,
 For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
 This vault a feasting presence‡ full of light.
 Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the Monument.]

How oft when men are at the point of death
 Have they been merry? which their keepers
 A lightning before death: O, how may I [call
 Call this a lightning?—O, my love! my wife!
 Death that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
 Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
 Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
 Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
 And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
 Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
 O, what more favour can I do to thee,
 Than with that hand that cut thy youth in
 To sunder his that was thine enemy? [twain,
 Forgive me, cousin!—Ah dead Juliet,
 Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
 That unsubstantial death is amorous;
 And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
 Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
 For fear of that, I will still stay with thee;
 And never from this palace of dim night
 Depart again; here, here will I remain
 With worms that are thy chambermaids; O,
 Will I set up my everlasting rest; [here
 And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
 From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
 The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
 A dateless bargain to engrossing death?—
 Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on

The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
 Here's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.
[Dies.]

Enter at the other end of the Church-yard,
Friar LAURENCE, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. Saint Francis! be my speed! how oft to-night [there!]

Have my old feet stumbled at graves?—Who's
 Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,

What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light

To grubs, and eye-less skulls? as I discern,
 It burneth in the Capel's monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir, and there's my
 One that you love. [master.]

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir;

My master knows not, but I am gone hence;
 And fearfully did menace me with death,
 If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone:—Fear comes upon me:

O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing. [here,
Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree

I dreamt my master and another fought,
 And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo? [Advances.]

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
 The stony entrance of this sepulchre?—

What mean these masterless and gory swords
 To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enters the Monument.]
 Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris, too? [hour]

And steep'd in blood?—Ah, what an unkind
 Is guilty of this lamentable chance!—

The lady stirs. [JULIET wakes and stirs.]

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?

I do remember well where I should be,
 And there I am:—Where is my Romeo?

[Noise within]
Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep;
 A greater Power than we can contradict

Hath thwarted our intents; come, come away;
 Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;

And Paris too, come, I'll dispose of thee
 Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:

Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
 Come, go, good Juliet. [Noise again.] I dare stay no longer. [Exit]

* I refuse to do as thou conjurest me to do, i. e., depart.

† The allusion is to a louvre or turret full of windows, by means of which ancient halls, &c., are illuminated.

‡ Conductor.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.— [hand?]

What's here? a cup, closed in my true love's Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end :—
O char! drink all ; and leave no friendly drop,

To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips ;
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.

[Kisses him.]

Thy lips are warm! [way?]

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy :—Which
Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger!

[Snatching Romeo's Dagger.
This is thy sheath ; [Stabs herself.] there rust,
and let me die.

[Falls on Romeo's Body, and dies.
Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place ; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody ;—Search about the church-yard :

Go, some of you, who e'er you find, attach. [Exeunt some.]

Pitiful sight ! here lies the county slain ;—
And Juliet bleeding ; warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried.—
Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search ;
[Exeunt other Watchmen.]

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie ;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with BALTHASAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the church-yard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Enter another Watchman, with Friar LAURENCE.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps :

We took this maddock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion ; Stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and Others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad ? [Romeo.]

La. Cap. The people in the street cry—
Some—Juliet, and some—Paris ; and all run,
With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears ? [Paris slain ;]

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county
And Romeo dead ; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes. [Romeo's man ;]

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd
With instruments upon them, fit to open

These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heavens!—O, wife ! look how our daughter bleeds !

This dagger hath mista'en,—for lo ! his house *
Is empty on the back of Montague,—
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

La. Cap. O me ! this sight of death is as a
That warns my old age to a sepulchre. [bell,
Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague ; for thou art early up.

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night ; [breath :

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her
What further woe conspires against mine ear?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see. [this,
Mon. O thou untaught ! what manners is in

To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a Till we can clear these ambiguities, [while,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent ;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death : Mean time forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience.—
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder ;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excused.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this. [breath

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that
Juliet ; [wife :

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful
I married them ; and their stolen-marriage-day
Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death [city :

Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pined.
You—to remove that siege † of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,

To county Paris :—Then comes she to me ;
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means

To rid her from this second marriage,
Or, in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion ; which so took effect

As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death : meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night.

To help to take her from her borrow'd grave
Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, friar John,
Was staid by accident ; and yesternight
Return'd my letter back : Then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,

Came I to take her from her kindred's vault ;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo :

* i.e., The scabbard.

† The dagger.

‡ Seat.

But, when I came, (some minute ere the time
Of her awakening,) here untimely lay
The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience:
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But (as it seems,) did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrificed, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.— [this?

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in
Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's
death:

And then in post he came from Mantua,
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father;
And threaten'd me with death, going in the
If I departe n t, and left him there. [vault,

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.— [watch?—

Where is the county's page, that raised the Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:

Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb:

And, by and by, my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes—that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—
Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!—
See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with
And I, for winking at your discords too, [love!
Have lost a brace of kinsmen*: all are punish'd.

Cap. O, brother Montague, give me thy hand;
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:

For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;

The sun for sorrow will not show his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punish'd:
For never was a story of more woe,
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.

* Mercutio and Paris.

This play is one of the most pleasing of our author's performances. The scenes are busy and various, the incidents numerous and important, the catastrophe irresistibly affecting, and the process of the action carried on with such probability, at least with such congruity to popular opinions, as tragedy requires.

Here is one of the few attempts of Shakspeare to exhibit the conversation of gentlemen, to represent the airy sprightliness of juvenile elegance. Mr. Dryden mentions a tradition, which might easily reach his time, of a declaration made by Shakspeare, that he was obliged to kill Mercutio in the third Act, lest he should have been killed by him. Yet he thinks him no such formidable person, but that he might have lived through the play, and died in his bed, without danger to the poet. Dryden well knew, had he been in quest of truth, in a pointed sentence, that more regard is commonly had to the words than the thought, and that it is very seldom to be rigorously understood. Mercutio's wit, gaiety, and courage, will always procure him friends that wish him a longer life: but his death is not precipitated, he has lived on the time allotted him in the construction of the play; nor do I doubt the ability of Shakspeare to have continued his existence, though some of his sallies are perhaps out of the reach of Dryden; whose genius was not very fertile of merriment, nor ductile to humour, but acute, argumentative, comprehensive, and sublime.

The Nurse is one of the characters in which the author delighted: he has, with great subtilty of distinction, drawn her at once loquacious and secret, obsequious and insolent, trusty and dishonest.

His comic scenes are happily wrought, but his pathetic strains are always polluted with some unexpected depravations. His persons, however distressed, have a conceit left them in their misery, a miserable conceit.—JOHNSON.

This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,

SCENE II. The same. A Room of State in the same.

Enter the King, Queen, HAMLET, POLO-NIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNE-LIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet, our dear brother's death

The memory be green ; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe ;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one-dropping eye ;
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole ‡,—
Taken to wife ; nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along :—For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,—

Holding a weak supposal of our worth ;
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death,
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Collegued with this dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands § of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for
him.

Now for myself, and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is : We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—

Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His further gait ¶ herein in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject :—and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway ;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you ?
You told us of some suit ; What is't, Laertes ?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice : What wouldst thou beg,
Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking ?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes ?

Laer. My dread lord,

From whence though willingly I came to Den-
To show my duty in your coronation ; [mark,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,

For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within, which passeth show;
These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term
To do obsequious sorrow: But to perséver
In obstinate condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis manfully grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, or mind impatient;
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what, we know, must be, and is as com-

As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first cause, till he that died to-day,
This must be so. We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe; and think of us,
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And, with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde * to our desire:
And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet:

I pray thee, stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;
Be as yourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unforced accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse† the heaven shall bruit‡

ACT II.

SCENE I. A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes,

Rey. I will, my lord. [Reynaldo.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good

Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquiry

Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said : very well said. Look you, sir,

inquire me first what Danes† are in Paris ;

And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense ; and finding, By this encompassment and drift of question,

That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it :

Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him ;

As thus,—I know his father, and his friends,

And, in part, him ;—Do you mark this, Reynaldo ?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

• Here and every where.

† Danes.

Pol. And, in part, him;—but, you may say, not well:

*But, if't he be I mean, he's very wild;
As dicted so and so;—and there put on him
What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.*

Reg. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
Drabbing:—You may go so far. [quarrelling,
Reg. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency; so quaintly,
That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults
That they may seem the taints of liberty:
The flash and out-break of a fiery mind;
A savageness* in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

Reg. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Reg. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the predominat† crimes,
The youth you breathe of, guilty, be assured,
He closes with you in this consequence;
Good sir, or so; or friend, or gentleman,—
According to the phrase, or the addition,
Of man, and country.

Reg. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—He does—
What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was about to say some something:—Where did I leave?

Reg. At, closes in the consequence [marry;

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—Ay,
He closes with you thus:—*I know the gentle-

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out;
So, by former lecture and advice, [not?

Reg. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Reg. Good, my lord,—

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Reg. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Reg. Well, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter OPHELIA.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter; [afflicted?

Oph. O, my lord, my lord; I have been so

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbraced;
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved; to his ankle;
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each
And with a look so piteous in purport, [other;
As if he had been loosed out of hell,
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;
But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he? [hard;

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me
Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
He raised a sigh so piteous and profound,
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk ||,
And end his being: That done, he lets me go;
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
For out o' doors he went without their helps,
And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the

Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it, Since not the exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was: What it should be, More than his father's death, that thus hath put him

So much from the understanding of himself, I cannot dream of: I entreat you both, [him:] That,—being of so young days brought up with And, since, so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,—

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court Some little time: so by your companies To draw him on to pleasures; and to gather, So much as from occasion you may glean, Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him, That, open'd, lies within our remedy. [thus.]

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;

And, sure I am, two men there are not living, To whom he more adheres. If it will please you

To show us so much gentry*, and good will, As to expend your time with us awhile, For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dread pleasures more into command Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey; And here give up ourselves, in the full bent, To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz:

And I beseech you instantly to visit My too much changed son.—Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our Pleasant and helpful to him! [practices,

Queen. Ay, amen! [Exit ROSENCRA NTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my Are joyfully return'd. [good lord,

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news. [good liege,

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God, and to my gracious king: And I do think, (or else this brain of mine Hunts not the trail of policy so sure As it hath used to do,) that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear. [sadors:

Pol. Give first admittance to the embas- My news shall be the fruit; to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit POLONIUS.

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main; His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends!

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway? [desires.

Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and Upon our first, he sent out to suppress His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack ||;

But, better look'd into, he truly found It was against your highness: Whereat grieved,

That so his sickness, age, and impotence, Was falsely borne in hand ||,—sends out arrests

Makes vow before his uncle, never more To give the assay of arms against your majesty.

And his commission, to employ those soldiers, So levied as before, against the Polack:

With an entreaty, herein further shown, [Gives a Paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass ' through your dominions for this enterprise;

On such regards of safety, and allowance, As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well: And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business.

Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour:

Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together: Most welcome home!

[Exit VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS. Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam, to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is,

Why day is day, night, night, and time is time, Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.

Therefore,—since brevity is the soul of wit, And tediousness the limbs and outward flourish,—

I will be brief: Your noble son is mad: Mad call I it; for, to define true madness, What is't, but to be nothing else but mad:

But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art. Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.

That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true, 'tis pity; And pity 'tis, 'tis true: a foolish figure;

But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him then: and now remains,

That we find out the cause of this effect; Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;

For this effect, defective, comes by cause: Thus it remains, and the remainder thus. Perpend.

Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: Now gather and surmise.

most beautified Ophelia,— That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautified is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.—Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou, the stars are fire; [Reads.

Doubt, that the sun doth move:

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt, I love.

I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown
And more above, hath his solicitings, [me:
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceived it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,) what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk, or table-book;
Or given my heart a working, mule and dumb;
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? no, I went round * to work,

And my young mistress thus did I bespeak;
*Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be:* and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,)
Fell into a sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think, 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I'd fain
That I have positively said, 'Tis so, [know that,])
When it proved otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
[Pointing to his Head and Shoulder.

If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four
Here in the lobby. [hours together

Queen.

So he does, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him:

Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter HAMLET, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away;
I'll board; I am presently:—O, give me leave.

[Exit King, Queen, and Attendants.
How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord? [man.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one picked man out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god, kissing carrion,—
Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i'the sun: conception is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive,—friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] Still harping on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first; he said, I was a fishmonger: He is far gone, far gone: and, truly in my youth
I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words!

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: All of which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, shall be as old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there's method in it. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o'the air.—How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him

* Roundly, without reserve.

and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools?

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir! [To POLONIUS.

[Exit POLONIUS.

Guil. My honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!—

Ham. My excellent good friends! how dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do you both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhappy;

On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. 'Faith her privates we.

Ros. In the secret parts of fortune? O, most true; she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord; but that the world is grown honest.

Ham. Then is dooms-day near: But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons; Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then, 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies; and our monarchs, and out-stretch'd heroes, the beggars' shadows: Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor of thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear, a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Any thing—but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a letter proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you? To GUILDENSTERN.

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.]—if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late, (but wherefore, I know not,) lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me, than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me, nor woman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there's no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten* entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted† them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o'the scere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel*? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an airy of children, little eyases†, that cry out on the top of question‡, and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, [so they call them] that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintain them? how are they escoted§? Will they pursue the quality|| no longer than they can sin? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre¶ them on to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange: for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those, that would make months at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little††. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of Trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come then: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply‡‡ with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north west:

when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a hand-saw.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern;—and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o'Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you; When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral comical, historical-pastoral, [tragical-historical, tragical-comical] historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ§§, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel,—what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,—One fair daughter, and no more,

The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.]

Ham. Am I not i'the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter, that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why, As by lot, God wot, and then you know, It came to pass, As most like it was,—The first row of the pious chanson||| will show you more; for look, my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! Why, thy face is valanced¶¶ since I saw thee last; Comest thou to beard me in Denmark?—What! my young lady and mistress! By-er lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine†††. not above once: for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare* to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments, in such matters, cried in the top; of mine,) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there were no saiaids in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the author of affection: but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see;—

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanean beast,—

Do you hear? let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time: After your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and insert in't? could you not?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord, and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and Guild.] I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' you:—Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous, that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit, That from her working all his visage wann'd; Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect, A broken voice, and his whole function suiting With forms to his conceit? And all for nothing! For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, [do, That he should weep for her? What would he Had he the motive and the cue for passion That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,

And cleave the general ear with horrid Make mad the guilty, and appal the free, Confound the ignorant, and amaze, indeed, The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I, A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak, Like John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, And can say nothing; no, not for a king, Upon whose property and most dear life,

A damn'd defeat* was made. Am I a coward? Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face? Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i'th' throat,

As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this? Ha!

Why, I should take it: for it cannot be, But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall To make oppression bitter: or, ere this, I should have fatted all the region kites With this slave's offal: Bloody, bawdy villain! Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!

Why, what an ass am I? This is most brave; That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with And fall a cursing, like a very drab, [words, A scullion!

[I have heard, Fie upon't! foh! About my brains! Humph! That guilty creatures, sitting at a play, Have by the very cunning of the scene Been struck so to the soul, that presently They have proclaim'd their malefactions; For murder, though it hath no tongue, will speak [players With most miraculous organ. I'll have these Play something like the murder of my father, Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks; I'll tent him† to the quick; if he do blench‡, I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen, May be a devil: and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps, Out of my weakness, and my melancholy, (As he is very potent with such spirits,) Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds More relative than this: The play's the thing, Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

ACT III.

SCENE I. A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference Get from him, why he puts on this confusion; Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted;

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guild. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands, most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him To any pastime!

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain We o'er-ranght|| on the way: of these we told And there did seem in him a kind of joy [him; To hear of it: They are about the court; And, as I think, they have already order This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true: And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesty to hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much To hear him so inclined.

Queen. Good gentlemen, give him a further edge, And drive his purpose on to these delights.

my lord.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question :—

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune ;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And, by opposing, end them ?—To die,—to sleep,—

No more ;—and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ach, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die ;—to sleep ;—
To sleep ! perchance to dream ;—ay, there's the rub ; [come,

For in that sleep of death what dreams may

But that the dread of something after death,—
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn ¶¶
No traveller returns,—puzzles the will ;
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of ?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all ;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought ;
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now !
The fair Ophelia : Nymph, in thy orisons ***,
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. My lord ?
Ham. Are you fair ?
Oph. What means your lordship ?
Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty ?
Ham. Ay, truly ; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness ; this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me :
for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock,
but we shall relish of it : I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery ; Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners ? I am myself indifferent honest ; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not borne me : I am very proud, revenge-

Get thee to a nunnery; Farewell: Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance: Go to; I'll no more off; it hath made me mad. SCENE II. A Hall in the same.

Enter HAMLET, and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows, and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant; it out-herods Herod‡: Pray you, avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'er-step not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure¶. Now this, overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one must, in your allowance, o'er-weigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of christians, nor the gait of christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bel-lowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope, we have reformed that la-differently with us.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, some necessary question† of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous; and shows a most

Ham. Bid the players make haste.—

[Exit POLONIUS.]

Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. Ay, my lord.

[Exeunt ROSEN. and GUILDEN.]

Ham. What, ho; Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation coped withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter: For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits, To feed, and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp; And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee, Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice, And could of men distinguish her election, She hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been

As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing; A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards Has ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those,

I prythee, when thou seest that act afoot, Even with the very comment of thy soul Observe my uncle: if his occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech, It is a damned ghost that we have seen; And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note: For I mine eyes will rivet to his face; And, after, we will both our judgments join In censure of his seeming.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i'faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed: You cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you played once in the University, you say?

[To POLONIUS.]

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i'the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that?

[To the King.]

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at OPHELIA's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think, I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry; for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: But, by'r-lady, he must build churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb show follows.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly, the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: Lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes comes in again, seeming to lament with

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: Be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,

Honour'd, beloved; and, haply, one as kind,
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!

Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
In second husband let me be accus'd!

None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances†† that second marriage move.

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;

A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe, you think what now you speak;

But, what we do determine, oft we break.

P. King. 'Tis deeply-sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i'th' world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap*. Marry, how! Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the galled jade wince†, our withers are unwrung.—

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you mistake your husbands.—Begin, murderer;—leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come;—

—The croaking raven

Doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

[Pours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for his estate. His name's Gonzago; the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frighted with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!

Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but HAMLET and HORATIO.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play:

For some must watch, while some must sleep;
Thus runs the world away.— [sleep,

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers §, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk || with me,) with two Provincial roses on my razed ¶ shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry  of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damen dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some music; come, the recorders †.—

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy ‡.—

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.
Come, some music.

Guil. Good, my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous discontented.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: But, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother; therefore no more, but to the matter: My mother, you say,—

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

O, the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too uninnerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages*, with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me? You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think, I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit POLONIUS.]

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends. [Exeunt ROS. GUIL. HOR., &c.]

Let me be cruel, not unnatural:

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:

SCENE III. A Room in the same.

Enter King, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDEN-STERN.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, [you;
To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare
I your commission will forthwith despatch,
And he to England shall along with you;
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunacy.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is,
To keep those many many bodies safe,
That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,
With all the stren^d and armour of the mind,
To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more
That spirit, upon whose weak depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it, with it; it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things [falls,
Are mortised and adjoin'd; which, when it
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;

For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guil. We will haste us.

[*Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDEN-
STERN.*]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's Behind the arras† I'll convey myself, [closet:
To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax
him home:

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet, that some more audience, than a
mother,
Since nature makes them partial, should o'er-hear

The speech of vantage. Fare you well, my
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed, [liege,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord

[Exit POLONIUS.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will;
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,
To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!

That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen,
May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice;
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rents?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed soul; that struggling to be free,
Art more engaged! Help, angels, make assay!
Bow stubborn knees! and heart, with strings
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe;
All may be well! (Retires and Kneels.)

Enter HAMLET

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying;
And now I'll do't; and so he goes to heaven:
And so am I revenged? That would be scann'd†:

A villain kills my father; and, for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this is hire and salary $, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as
May; heaven?

And how his audit stands who knows, save
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: And am I then revenged,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No. [Hent:]

Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;
Or in the incestuous pleasures of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't:

Then trip him, that his heels may kick at

And that his soul may be as damnd and
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days.

The King rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go.

Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak.

shall not budge;

You go not, till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help!

Ham. How now? a rat!

Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain.
[Falls, and dies.]

Queen. O, me! what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay, I know not:
Is it the king?

*[Lifts up the Arras, and draws forth
POLONIUS.]*

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this! [good mother,]

Ham. A bloody deed!—almost as bad,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.—

Leave wringing of your hands: Peace; sit

And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,

If damned custom have not brazed it so,
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;
Calls virtue hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows
As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction * plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow;

Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful † visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me! what act!
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on
this;

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station † like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband.—Look you now, what follows:

Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you
eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten † on this moor? Ha! have you
eyes?

You cannot call it love; for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame; it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; And what judgment

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind††?

Or but a sickly part of one true sense

To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge;
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O, Hamlet! speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots,
As will not leave their tinct †.

A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,

Ghost. Do not forget: This visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits;
O, step between her and her fighting soul;
Conceit ††† in weakest bodies strongest works;
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady!

Queen. Alas! how is't with you?
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements †††,
Starts up, and stands on end. O, gent e son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

That to the use of actions fair and good

And that shall lend a kind of easiness

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good

And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord,
[Pointing to POLONIUS.]
I do repent: But heaven hath pleased it so,—
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night!—
I must be cruel, only to be kind:

Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.—
But one word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do?
Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid

Let the bloated king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his

And let him, for a pair of reechy || kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd

But mad in craft. 'Twere good, you let him

Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?

Let the birds fly; and, like the famous ape,

And break your own neck down. [breath,

Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?
Queen. Alack,

I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two school-fellows,—

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd‡‡,— They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,

And marshal me to knavery: Let it work;
For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer [hard,
Hoist with his own petar§§: and it shall go
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,

When in one line two crafts directly meet.—
This man shall set me packing.

I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room:—
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.

Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:—
Good night, mother.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The same.

Enter King, Queen, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs; these profound heaves;
You must translate; 'tis fit we understand
Where is your son? [them:]

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—

[To ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN, who go out.]

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!
King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier: In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries, A rat! a rat!
And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us, had we been there:

* Frenzy. † Mannre. ‡ Bend. § A term of endearment.
|| Steaming with heat. ¶ Toad.  Cat. †† Experiments.
‡‡ Having their teeth. §§ Blown up with his own bomb.

His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt*.

This mad young man: but, so much was our love,

We would not understand what was most fit;
But like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath
kill'd:

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore,
Among a mineral of metals base, sponge!—what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first morthed, to be last swallowed: When he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord?

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide

Enter King attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose?
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's loved of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And, where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd, [and even,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern? bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are 'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there.

There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads.] *Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase: Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour, and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant, they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me, like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn have sent: and repair thou to me with as have words to speak in thine ear, will make

King. Now must your conscience my ac-

And you must put me in your heart for friend;
Sith* you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursued my life.

Laer. It well appears:—But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So criminal and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things
You mainly were stirr'd up. [else,

King. O, for two special reasons,
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much un-
sinew'd; [mother,

But yet to me they are strong. The queen his Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,)
She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is, the great love the general gender† bear him:
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring‡ that turneth wood to stone, [rows,

Convert his gyves|| to graces; so that my ar-
too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections:—But my revenge will come. [must not think,

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger, [more:

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear
I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now? what news?

Did not together pluck such envy from him, As did that one; and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege†.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears, Than settled age his sables, and his weeds, Importing health and graveness.—Two months since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—[French, I have seen myself, and served against, the And they can well on horseback; but this gallant

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, If you opposed them: Sir, this report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy, That he could nothing do, but wish and beg Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you. Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you? Or are you like the painting of a sorrow, A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father;

But that I know, love is begun by time; And that I see, in passages of proof¶, Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.

There lives within the very flame of love A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it; And nothing is at a like goodness still; For goodness, growing to a pleurisy, Dies in his own too-much: That we would do, We should do when we would; for this would changes,

Laer. I will do't:

And, for the purpose, I'll anoint my sword. Which time, she chanted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable†† of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indued

Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay

Laer. Alas then, she is drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church-yard.

Enter Two Clowns, with Spades, &c.

1 Clow. Is she to be buried in christian burial, that willfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clow. I tell thee, she is; therefore make her grave straight§§: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it christian burial.

1 Clow. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clow. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clow. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: If I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: Argal, she drowned herself witi-ngly.

2 Clow. Nay, but hear you, goodman delver.

1 Clow. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes: mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: Argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clow. But is this law?

1 Clow. Ay, marry is't; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clow. Will you ha' the trnth on't? If this had not been a gentiewoman, she should have been buried out of christian buria..

1 Clow. Why, there thou say'st: And the more pity; that great folks shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even||| christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clow. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clow. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clow. Why, he had none.

1 Clow. What, art a neatnen? How dost thou understand the scripture? The scripture says,
Adam digged; Could he dig without arms?
I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clow. Go to.

1 Clow. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clow. The gallows-maker; for that frame
outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clow. I like thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows does well: but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill, to say, the gallows is built stronger than the church; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again: come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke*.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

2 Clo. Mess, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cndgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker; the houses that he makes, lasts till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan, and fetch me a stoup of liquor.

[Exit 2 Clowns.]

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth when I did love, did lov't,

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove
O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business? he sings at grave-making.

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath clau'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me into the land,
As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a scull.]

Ham. That scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: How the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which would say, Good-morrow, my sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord? This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so; and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade: Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones co't no more the breeding, but to play at loggats! with them? mine ache to think on't.

1 Clown.

A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings.]

For—and a shrouding-sheet:

O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up a scull.]

Ham. There's another: Why may not that be the scull of a lawyer? Where be his quidlits & now, his quillits||, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce¶ with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes; his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box? and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves'-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow:—Whose grave's this, sirrah?

1 Clo. Mine, sir.—

O, a pit of clay for to be made [Sings.]

For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

1 Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not your's: for my part, I do not lie in't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't, and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Is a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

1 Clo. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked†, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i'th' year, I came to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long's that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was that very day that young Hamlet was born: he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. 'Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark; I have been saxon here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. 'Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corsers now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a scull now hath lain you i'the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same scull, sir, was Yorick's scull, the king's jester.

Ham. This? [Takes the scull.]

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Alas! poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one, now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour* she must come: make her laugh at that.—Pr'y-thee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander look'd o'this fashion i'the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

[Throws down the scull.]

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so?

Ham. No faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam: And why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel? Imperious† Cæsar, dead, and turn'd to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away: O, that the earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw! But soft! but soft! aside:—Here comes the king.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest. No more be done! We should profane the service of the dead, To sing a requiem††, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i'the earth;— And from her fair and unpolluted flesh, May violets spring!—I tell thee, churlish priest, A minist'ring angel shall my sister be, When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell!

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. Hear you, sir;
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I loved you ever: But it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. That is most certain.
Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scart'd about me, in the dark
Groped I to find out them: had my desire;
Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again: making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unseal

Hor. Is't possible?

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. Ay, 'beseech you. [lanies,]

They had begun the play;—I sat me down;
Devised a new commission; wrote it fair:

How to forget that learning; but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service: Wilt thou know

Hor. Peace; who comes here? Enter OSRIC.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly‡?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him: He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'Tis a chough§; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit: Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks it is very sultry and hot; or my complexion—

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as 'twere,—I cannot tell how—My lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[HAMLET moves him to put on his Hat.

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for my ease, in good faith||. Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences¶, of very soft society, and great showing: Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent†† of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetic of memory; and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and, who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more‡‡.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination§§ of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve||| me;—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellency Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need¶¶ he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has impawned as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers†††, and so: Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the marginal‡‡‡, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy ‡ age dotes on), only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter ; a kind of yesty § collection, which carries them through and through the most fond ¶ and winnowed opinions ; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall : He sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure : if his fitness speaks, mine is ready ; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you, to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so ; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice ; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think, how ill all's here about my heart : but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery ; but it is such a kind of gain-giving ¶, as would, perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it : I will forestal  their repair hither, and say, you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury ; there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come ; if it be not to come, it will be now ; if it be not now, yet it will come : the readiness is all : Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what is't to leave betimes † ! Let be.

Enter King, Queen, LAERTES, Lords, OSRIC, and Attendants, with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the Hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir : I have done you wrong ;

But pardon it, as you are a gentleman.

This presence ‡ knows, and you must needs have heard,

How I am punish'd with a sore distraction.

What I have done,

That might your nature, honour, and exception, Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes † Never, Ham— If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away, [let :

And, when he's not himself, does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then ? His madness : I† be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd ;

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purposed evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot my arrow o'er the house,

And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge : but in my terms of honour,

I stand aloof ; and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace, [time,

To keep my name ungored ‡† : But till that

I do receive your offer'd love like love,

And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely ;

And will this brother's wager frankly play.—

Give us the foils ; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes ; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i'the darkest night, Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.—

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.]

Osr. Ay, my good lord. [table:—]

King. Set me the stoups * of wine upon that

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn; Give me

the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoneer without,

The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth, [begin:—]

Now the king drinks to Hamlet.—Come,

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well,—again.

King. Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound: and Cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by awhile.

Come.—Another hit; What say you?

[They play.]

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.—

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin ‡, rub thy

brows:

The queen carouses § to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,——

King. Gertrude, do not drink. [me.]

Queen. I will, my lord;—I pray you, pardon

King. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.

[Aside.]

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience. [Aside.]

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence;

I am afeard, you make a wanton || of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.]

Osr. Nothing neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

[LAERTES wounds HAMLET; then, in scuffling, they change Rapiers, and HAMLET wounds LAERTES.]

King. Part them, they are incensed.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.]

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!

Hor. They bleed on both sides:—How is

Osr. How is't, Laertes? [it, my lord?]

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe, Osr;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O

my dear Hamlet!

The drink, the drink;—I am poison'd. [Dies.]

Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls.]

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good,

In thee there is not half an hour's life;

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated ¶, and envenom'd: the foul practice

Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,

Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;

I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.

Envenom'd too!—Then, venom to thy work.

[Stabs the King.]

Osr. & Lords. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

[damned Dane.]

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous

Drink off this potion:—Is the union here?

Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Laer. He is justly served;

It is a poison temper'd  by himself.—

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon

thee;

Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I fol-

That are but mates or audience to this act,

If the dramas of Shakspeare were to be characterized, each by the particular excellence which distinguishes it from the rest, we must allow to the tragedy of Hamlet the praise of variety. The incidents are so numerous, that the argument of the play would make a long tale. The scenes are interchangeably diversified with merriment and solemnity: with merriment that includes judicious and instructive observations; and solemnity not strained by poetical violence above the natural sentiments of man. New characters appear from time to time in continual succession, exhibiting various forms of life and particular modes of conversation. The pretended madness of Hamlet causes much mirth, the mournful distraction of Ophelia fills the heart with tenderness, and every personage produces the effect intended, from the apparition that chills the blood with horror, to the top, that exposes affectation to just contempt.

The conduct is perhaps not wholly secure against objections. The action is indeed for the most part in continual progression, but there are some scenes which neither forward nor retard it. Of the feigned madness of Hamlet there appears no adequate cause, for he does nothing which he might not have done with the reputation of sanity. He plays the madman zoost, when he treats Ophelia with so much rudeness, which seems to be wanton cruelty.

Hamlet is, through the whole piece, rather an instrument than an agent. After he has, by the stratagem of the play, convicted the King, he makes no attempt to punish him; and his death is at last effected by an incident which Hamlet had no part in producing.

The poet is accused of having shown little regard to poetical justice, and may be charged with equal neglect of poetical probability. The apparition left the regions of the dead to little purpose; the revenge which he demands is not obtained, but by the death of him that was required to take it; and the gratification, which would arise from the destruction of an usurper and a murderer, is abased by the untimely death of Ophelia, the young, the beautiful, the ~~harmless~~, and the pious.—JOHNSON.

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior, The duke's in council; and your noble self, I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council! In this time of the night!—Bring him away: Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself, Or any of my brothers of the state, Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own: For if such actions may have passage free, Bond-slaves, and pagans, shall our statesmen be. Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend sig-
 My very noble and approved good masters,
 That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
 It is most true; true, I have married her;
 The very head and front of my offending
 Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,

And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
 For since these arms of mine hath seven years' pith, [used

Till now some nine moons wasted, they have
 Their dearest action ‡ in the tented field;
 And little of this great world can I speak,
 More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
 And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
 In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
 Of my whole course of love; what drugs,
 what charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
 (For such proceeding I am charged withal,)
 I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
 Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
 Blush'd at herself; And she,—in spite of nature,
 Of years, of country, credit, every thing,—
 To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on?
 It is a judgment maim'd, and most imperfect,
 That will confess—perfection so could err
 Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
 To find out practices of cunning hell,

Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
 That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,

Or with some dram conjured to this effect,
 He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof;
 Without more certain and more overt test §;
 Than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak;—
 Did you by indirect and forced courses
 Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?
 Or came it by request, and such fair question
 As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
 Send for the lady to the Sagittary ¶,
 And let her speak of me before her father:
 If you do find me foul in her report,
 The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
 Not only take away, but let your sentence
 Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.—

[Exeunt IAGO and Attendants.

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
 I do confess the vices of my blood,
 So justly to your grave ears I'll present
 How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
 And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father loved me; oft invited me;
 Still question'd me the story of my life,
 From year to year; the battles, sieges, for-
 That I have pass'd. [tunes,
 I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
 To the very moment that he bade me tell it.
 Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances,
 Of moving accidents, by flood, and field;
 Of hair-breadth scapes i' the imminent deadly
 Of being taken by the insolent foe, [breach;
 And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
 And portance  in my travel's history:
 Wherein of antres † vast, and deserts idle,
 Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads
 touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
 And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
 The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
 Do grow beneath their shoulders. These things to hear,

Would Desdemona seriously incline: [thence;
 But still the house affairs would draw her
 Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
 She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
 Devour up my discourse: Which I observing,
 Took once a pliant hour; and found good means
 To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
 That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,

That heaven had made her such a man : she

And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint, I spake :

She loved me for the dangers I had pass'd ;
And I loved her, that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have used ;
Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

Duke. I think, this tale would win my Good Brabantio, daughter too.—
Take up this mangled matter at the best :
Men do their broken weapons rather use,

Do you perceive in all this noble company,
Where most you owe obedience ?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty :
To you, I am bound for life, and education ;
My life, and education, both do learn me
How to respect you ; you are the lord of duty,
I am hitherto your daughter : But here's my husband ;

And so much duty as my mother show'd

So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God be with you !—I have done :—
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs ;
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—
Come hither, Moor :

I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart [jewel,

I would keep from thee.—For your sake,
I am glad at soul I have no other child ;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,

Patience her injury a mockery makes.

He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile ;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.

He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he

But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,

These present wars against the Ottomites.

As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.
Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I ; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,

By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend a gracious ear ;

And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona ?
Des. That I did love the Moor to live with
him,

My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world ; my heart's subdued

Even to the very quality of my lord :
I saw Othello's visage in his mind ;

And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently ¶ drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment: and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villanous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years! and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond ; but it is not in virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which, our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme; supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many; either to have it steril with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted †† lusts; whereof I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect ‡‡, or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: Drown thyself? drown cats, and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard §§; Isay, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration;—put but money in thy purse.—These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice.—She must have change, she must; therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring ||| barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribulation of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me;—Go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason; Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Rod.

Rod. What say you? [derigo?]

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear.

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell: put money enough in your purse. Erit RODERIGO.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse:

For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,

If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets

He has done my office: I know not if't be true;

But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.

Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now;

To get his place, and to plume up my will;
A double knavery,—How? how?—Let me see:—

After some time, to abuse Othello's ear,

That he is too familiar with his wife:—

He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,

To be suspected; framed to make women

The Moor is of a free and open nature, [false.]

That thinks men honest, that but seem to be

And will as tenderly be led by the nose, [so;]

As asses are.

ACT II.

SCENE I. A Sea-Port Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter MONTANO and Two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea? [flood;]

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is, a high-wrought I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Desery a sail. [at land;]

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them, [this?]

Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of 2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:

For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shaked surge, with high and monstrous main,

Seems to cast water on the burning bear ♄,
And quench the guards of the ever fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On th' enchain'd flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not in shelter'd and embay'd, they are
It is impossible they bear it out. [drown'd;]

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lords! our wars are done;
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designment halts: A noble ship of Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance

On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronese; Michael Cassio,
Lientenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,

And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio,—though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly, [parted]

And prays the Moor be safe; for they were
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. 'T'ray heaven he be;

For I have served him, and the man commands

As well to see the vessel that's come in,

As throw out our eyes for brave Othello;

Even till we make the main, and the aerial

An indistinct regard. [blue,]

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;

For every minute is expectancy

isle,

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!—Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal* counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: Ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I insnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will give thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in†. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips?—would they were clyster-pipes for your sake?—[Trumpet.] The Moor, I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello?

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas, Olympus-high; and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 'Twere now to be most happy; for I fear, My soul hath her content so absolute, That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid, But that our loves and comforts should increase, Even as our days do grow.

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—I cannot speak enough of this content, It stops me here; it is too much of joy: And this, and this, the greatest discords be.

[Kissing her.]
That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. O, you are well tuned now! But I'll set down the pegs that make this music, As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let's to the castle.—
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How do our old acquaintance of this isle?—Honey, you shall be well desired in Cyprus, I have found great love amongst them. O my I prattle out of fashion‡, and I dote [sweet, In mine own comforts.—I prythee, good Iago, Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers: Bring thou the master to the citadel; He is a good one, and his worthiness

Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona—more well met at Cyprus.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard:—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: And will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite,—loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does? a knave very voluble; no further conscionable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: A slippery and subtle knave; a finder out of occasions: that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: A devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after: A pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition††.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: Blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion: Pish!—But, sir, be you

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in cholour; and, haply†, with his truncheon may strike at you: Provoke him, that he may; for, even out of that, will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer; them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessities ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;

Enter a Herald, with a Proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices†† are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael look you to the guard to night:

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;

But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.

Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest,

[dear love,

Let me have speech with you.—Come, my The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;

That profit's yet to come'twixt me and you.— Good night. [Exeunt OTH. DES. and Attend.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast† us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona; who † let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets. Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified§§ too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortu-

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me.

[Exit CASSIO.]

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence

As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night caroused

Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch:

Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits,

That hold their honours in a wary distance,

The very elements of this warlike isle,—

Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,

And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action

That may offend the isle:—But here they come:

If consequence do but approve my dream,

My boat sails freely both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO, and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse* already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I'm a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink: [Sings.

And let me the canakin clink;

A soldier's a man;

A life's but a span;

Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

[Wine brought in.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice†.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer†

His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear,

With that he call'd the tailor lown‡.

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis pride that pulls the country down,

Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No: for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well,—Heaven's above all; and there be souls that must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general or any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand:—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then: you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

It were an honest action to say

I do love Cassio well; and would do much

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant;

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,
 Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—
 Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;
 Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed!
 [Bell rings.]

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
 The town will rise, God's will, lieutenant!
 You will be shamed for ever. [hold;]

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—

Oth. Hold, for your lives. [he dies.]

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant, sir, Montano,
 gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
 Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold,
 for shame! [arise this?]

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence
 Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that
 Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
 For christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl!

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
 Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.
 Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle
 From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
 Speak, who began this? on thy love I charge
 thee. [even now,

Iago. I do not know;—friends all but now,
 In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
 Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,
 (As if some planet had unwitting men,)
 Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
 In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
 Any beginning to this peevish odds;
 And 'would in action glorious I had lost
 These legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;

The gravity and stillness of your youth
 The world hath noted, and your name is great
 In mouths of wisest censure; What's the matter,

That you unlace your reputation thus,
 And spend your rich opinion for the name
 Of a night brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;
 Your officer, Iago, can inform you—
 While I spare speech, which something now
 offends me;

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught
 By me that's said or done amiss this night;
 Unless self-charity† be sometime a vice;
 And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
 When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
 My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
 And passion, having my best judgment col-
 lied‡,

Assays to lead the way: If I once stir,
 Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
 How this foul rout began, who set it on;
 And he that is approved|| in this offence,
 Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,

Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war,
 Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
 To manage private and domestic quarrel,
 In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
 'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affined¶, or leagu'd in office,
 Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
 Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:
 I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
 Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
 Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.
 Montano and myself being in speech,
 There comes a fellow crying out for help;
 And Cassio following him with determined sword,

To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman
 Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
 Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
 Lest, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,)
 The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, [ther

Outran my purpose; and I return'd the ra-
 For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
 And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night,
 I ne'er might say before: when I came back,
 (For this was brief,) I found them close together,

At blow and thrust; even as again they were,
 When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:—
 But men are men; the best sometimes forget:
 Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—
 As men in rage strike those that wish them
 best,—

Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, received,
 From him that fled, some strange indignity,
 Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago;
 Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
 Making it light to Cassio:—Cassio, I love thee,
 But never more be officer of mine.—

Des. What's the matter, dear?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; Come away
Sir, for your hurts, [to bed.—
Myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off.

[To MONTANO, who is led off.

Iago, look with care about the town;
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.—

Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldier's life,
To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife.

[Exeunt all but IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O,
I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My reputation, Iago! my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood*, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his fenceless dog, to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet, an officer. Drunk! and speak parrot†! and squabble, swagger, swear! and discourse fustian with one's own shadow!—O, thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O, that men should out an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist: As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general;—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement, of her parts and graces;—confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed, a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested: This broken joint, between you and her husband, entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay† worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago.

[Exit CASSIO.

Iago. And what's he then, that says—I play the villain?

When this advice is free, I give, and honest, Probal to thinking, and (indeed) the course To win the Moor again? For, 'tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit; she's framed as fruitful§ As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,— His soul is so enfeather'd to her love, That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I then a villain,

To counsel Cassio to this parallel || course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell! When devils will their blackest sins put on, They do suggest¶ at first with heavenly shows, As I do now: For while this honest fool Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes, And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,— That she repeals him for her body's lust, And, by how much she strives to do him good, She shall undo her credit with the Moor.

My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience!—

What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?

Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.

Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio:

Yet fruits that blossom first, will first be ripe:
Content thyself awhile.—By the mass, 'tis morning;

Pleasure, and action, make the hours seem
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music, the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir,

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quietest. There's a poor piece of gold for thee; if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife, be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exit.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke

Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,

To send in to your wife: My suit to her

Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona

Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently;

And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor

Out of the way, that your converse and business

May be more free. [Exit.]

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never

A Florentine more kind and honest. [knew

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry

For your displeasure;† but all will soon be well.

The general, and his wife, are talking of it;

And she speaks for you stontly: The Moor replies,

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus,

And great affinity; and that, in wholesome wisdom,

He might not but refuse you: but he protests

And needs no other suitor, but his likings;

To take the safest occasion by the front,

To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—

If you think fit, or that it may be done,

Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in;

I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot

And, by him, do my duties to the state:

That done, I will be walking on the works,

Just at the time. † Nice distinctions. ‡ The displeasure you have incurred from Othello.

Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentleman,—shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship.

Exeunt.

SCENE III. Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assured, good Cassio, I will do all my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do; I know it grieves As if the case were his. [my husband]

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt, Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again

As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O, sir, I thank you: You do love my lord: [assured,

You have known him long; and be you well He shall in strangeness stand no further off Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet, Or breed itself so out of circumstance, That, I being absent, and my place supplied, My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here, I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee, If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article: my lord shall never rest; I'll watch him tame*, and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift: I'll intermingle every thing he does [Cassio; With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, For thy solicitor shall rather die, Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO, and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes My lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, And hear me speak. [ease,

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, well, Do your discretion. [Exit CASSIO.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what. [wife?

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it,

That he would steal away so guilty-like,

Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord?

I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't, you mean? [my lord.

Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good If I have any grace, or power to move you, His present reconciliation take;

For, if he be not one that truly loves you, That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning†, I have no judgment in an honest face:

I pry'thee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled, That he hath left part of his grief with me;

I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some

Des. But shall't be shortly? [other time.

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner, then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home;

I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn; [morn;

Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday

I pray thee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;

And yet his trespass, in our common reason, (Save that, they say, the wars must make examples

Out of their best‡), is not almost a fault

To incur a private check: When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul, What you could ask me, that I should deny, Or stand so mammering§ on. What! Michael Cassio, [time,

That came a wooing with you; and many a When I have spoke of you dispraisingly, Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much.

Oth. Pry'thee, no more: let him come I will deny thee nothing. [when he will;

Des. Why, this is not a boon; 'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves, Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you Or sue to you to do peculiar profit [warm; To your own person: Nay, when I have a suit,

Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed, It shall be full of poize|| and difficulty, And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing: Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this, To leave me but a little to myself. [lord.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight. [teach you;

Des. Emilia, come:—Be it as your fancies Whate'er you be; I am obedient.

[Exit, with EMILIA.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul, But I do love thee! and when I love thee not, Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord.

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

• Hawks are tamed by keeping them from sleep.
§ Hesitating.

† Knowledge.
|| Weight.

‡ Best men.

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd
Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—Discern'st thou
Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Oth. Ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something:

I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'd'st not
When Cassio left my wife; What did'st not like?

And, when I told thee—he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou cry'd'st, Indeed?

And didst contract and purse thy brow toge-
As if thou then had'st shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit: If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think, thou dost:
And—for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st
Therefore these stops of thine fright me the
more:

For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just,
They are close denotements, working from the
That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,—
I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or, those that be not, 'would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they Iago. Why then,

I think that Cassio is an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:

I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings.
As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst
The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to,
Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—

As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so
But some uncleanly apprehensions

Keep leets*, and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—

Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses; and, oft, my jealousy Shapes faults that are not,—I entreat you then,

From one that so imperfectly conjects†,
You'd take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble

Out of his scattering and unsure observance:
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name, in man, and woman,
dear my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls:

Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to
But he, that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;

Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Hal

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy
It is the green-eyed monster, which doth mock

The meat it feeds on: That cuckold lives in
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough;

But riches, finess†, is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt,

Is—once to be resolved: Exchange me for a
When I shall turn the business of my soul

To such exsufficate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me
jealous,

To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves com-
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances
well;

Where virtue is, these are more virtuous§:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove † Conjectures.

‡ Endless, unbounded.

§ "Which makes fair gifts false"

And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of this, for now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound, Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof. [Cassio;

Look to your wife; observe her well with
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure;
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abused; look to't:

I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is—not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear your

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming*

To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, 'twas witchcraft:—But I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.

I hope, you will consider, what is spoke Comes from my love;—But, I do see you are moved:—

I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues†, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall in such vile success

As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's more worthy

Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends:
Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—

But pardon me; I do not, in position,
Distinctly speak of her: though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And (happily) repent.

Oth.

Farewell, farewell.

If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature, doubtless, [unfolds,

Sees and knows more, much more, than he

Iago. My lord, I would I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time;
And, though it be fit that Cassio have his place,

(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability,)

Yet, if you please to hold him off a while,

You shall by that perceive him and his means:

Note if your lady strain his entertainment;

With any strong or vehement opportunity;

Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,

Let me be thought too busy in my fears,

(As worthy cause I have, to fear—I am.)

And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,

Of human dealings: If I do prove her haggard‡, [strings,

Though that her jesses¶ were my dear heart-
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,

To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black;

And have not those soft parts of conversation

That chamberers have:—Or, for I am declined

Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much;—

She's gone; I am abused; and my relief

Must be—to loath her. O curse of marriage,

That we can call these delicate creatures ours,

And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,

And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,

Than keep a corner in the thing I love

For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;

Prerogatives are they less than the base;

'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death;

Even then this forked plague is fated to us,

When we do quicken††. Desdemona comes:

Enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?

Your dinner, and the generous islanders

By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin†† is too little;

[He puts the Handkerchief from him,
and it drops.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt OTH. and DES.]

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin :
This was her first remembrance from the Moor :

My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it : but she so loves the token,

(For he conjured her, she would ever keep it,) That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en
And give it Iago : [out,

What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I ;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

[Enter IAGO.]

Iago. How now ! what do you here alone ?

Emil. Do not you chide ; I have a thing for you. [thing.

Iago. A thing for me ?—it is a common

Emil. Ha !

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all ? What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief !

Iago. What handkerchief ?

Emil. What handkerchief !

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona ;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her ?

Emil. No, faith : she let it drop by negligence ; [up.

And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench ; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with it, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it ?

Iago. Why, what's that to you ? [Snatching it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,

Give it me again : Poor lady ! she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not you known of't* ; I have use for it.

Go, leave me. [Exit EMILIA.

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it : Trifles, light as air,
Are, to the jealous, confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something

But, with a little act upon the blood,

mandragora†,

Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'd'st ‡ yesterday.

* Seem as if you knew nothing of the matter.

‡ Possessedst.

§ The vilest of the camp.

|| All tenderness, all pity.

Oth.

Ha ! ha ! false to me ?

To me ?

Iago. Why, how now, general ? no more of that. [on the rack :—

Oth. Avaunt ! be gone ! thou hast set me
I swear, 'tis better to be much abused,
Than but to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord !

Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust ?

I saw it not, thought it not ; it harm'd not me :
I slept the next night well, was free and merry ;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips :

He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp
Pioneers § and all, had tasted her sweet body.
So I had nothing known : O now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind ! farewell content !
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars
That make ambition virtue ! O, farewell !
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill

trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner ; and all quality, [war !
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious
And O, you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,

Farewell ! Othello's occupation's gone !

Iago. Is it possible ?—My lord,——

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore ;

Be sure of it ; give me the ocular proof ;

[Taking him by the Throat.]

Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my waked wrath.

Iago. Is it come to this ?

Oth. Make me see it ; or (at the least) so prove it,

That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
To hang a doubt on : or woe upon thy life !

Iago. My noble lord,—— [me,

Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture
Never pray more, abandon all remorse !
On horror's head horrors accumulate :
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth
amazed,

For nothing canst thou do damnation add
Greater than that.

Iago. O grace ! O heaven defend me !
Are you a man ? have you a soul or sense ?—
God be wi' you ; take mine office.—O
wretched fool,

That livest to make thine honesty a vice !—
O monstrous world ! Take note, take note,
O world,

To be direct and honest is not safe.—
I thank you for this profit ; and from hence I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay :—Thou shouldst be honest.

† The mandrake has a soporific quality.

§ The vilest of the camp. Pioneers were generally degraded soldiers.

|| All tenderness, all pity.

Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not;
I'll have some proof: Her name, that was as fresh

As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face.—If there be cords, or knives,

Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure 't.—Would I were satisfied!

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
I do repent me that I put it to you. You would be satisfied.

Oth. Would? nay, I will.
Iago. And may: but how? how satisfied, my lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on?
Behold her tupp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect: Damn them
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster, [then,
More than their own? What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?

It is impossible you should see this, [keys,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,—
Which lead directly to the door of truth,—
Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

Oth. Give me a living* reason she's dishonest.
Iago. I do not like the office: [loyal.

But sith I am entered in this cause so far,
Prick'd to it by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs;
One of this kind is Cassio:

In sleep I heard him say, Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!

And then, sir, would he gripe, and wring my hand,

Cry, O, sweet creature! and then kiss me
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips: then laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then

Cry'd, Cursed fate! that gave thee to the Moor!
Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion;

'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.
Iago. And this may help to thicken other
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this;
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.
Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief,

(I am sure it was your wife's,) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that, or any that was hers,—

It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives;

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!
Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven:
'Tis gone.

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne;

To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy
For 'tis of aspicks' tongues! [fraught,

Iago. Pray, be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic, and the Hellespont;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by yond' marble heaven,

In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels.

I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.— [Kneels.

Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
You elements that clip us round about!
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart, [mand,
To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command
To obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody work soever.

Oth. I greet thy love, [bounteous,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance
And will upon the instant put thee to't:
Within these three days let me hear thee say,
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done, at your

Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies?

* Speaking, manifest. † Since. ‡ The heart on which thou wast enthroned.

Clo. I dare not say, he lies any where.
Des. Why, man?
Clo. He is a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.
Des. Go to; Where lodges he?
Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.
Des. Can any thing be made of this?
Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say—he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in my own throat.
Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?
Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.
Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well.
Clo. To do this, is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.]
Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?
Emil. I know not, madam.
Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
 Full of cruzadoes*. And, but my noble Moor is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jealous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill-thinking.
Emil. Is he not jealous?
Des. Who, he? I think, the sun, where he was born,

Emil. Look where he comes.
Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio Be call'd to him.—How is't with you, my lord.
 Enter OTHELLO.
Oth. Well, my good lady:—[Aside.] O, hardness to dissemble!—

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answered: They are not ever jealous for the cause, [so;] But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster, Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio walk here- about:

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit, And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home? How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? P'faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago I will be found most cunning in my patience; But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.Iago. That's not amiss; But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw? [OTHELLO withdraws.

Re-enter Cassio.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry
Do you intend it? [her:

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph? [Aside.

Cas. I marry her!—what? a customer?† I think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so: They laugh that win.
[Aside.

Iago. Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry her.

Cas. Pr'ythee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well. [Aside.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out:
she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.
Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story. [Aside.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians;
and thither comes this bauble; by this hand,
she falls thus about my neck:—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it. [Aside.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so hales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Now he tells, how she pluck'd him to my chamber: O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [Aside.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look where she comes.

Enter BIANCA.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew‡! marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you!
What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work?—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there!
This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There,—give it your hobby-horse:
whosoever you had it, I'll take out no work
on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now? how now?

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief! [Aside.

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith I must, she'll rail in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come; Will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing:
—A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—
So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—And then, of so gentle a condition||

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain: But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases; very good.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then;

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Re-enter EMILIA.

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady,

Des. I have none: Do not talk to me

Emilia;

I cannot weep; nor answer I have none,

But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night

Des. 'Tis meet I should be used so, very meet.

How have I been behaved, that he might stick
The small'st opilion on my great'st abuse?

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you? [young babes,

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach
Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:

He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhored her, [her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon
As true hearts cannot bear.

was,

That turn'd your wit the seamy side† without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago,

What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of
heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say, where;
It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

And the great messengers of Venice stay:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exit DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter RODRIGO.

How now, Roderigo?

Rod. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly
with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou do'st† me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now,) keep'st from me all conveniency, than appliest me with the least advantage of hope.
I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already
I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances, are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly,

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist: You have told me—she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance‡; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: By this hand, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but, yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean—removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlot, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exit.

SCENE III. Another Room in the Castle.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further. [Walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

O.—Desdemona,— My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant, I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exit OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler

Des. He says he will return incontinent. He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, go. Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would, you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so ay prove him, [frowns, That even his stubbornness, his checks, and Prythee, unpun me,—have grace and favour in them. [on the bed.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me

Des. All's one:—Good father! how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prythee, shroud me In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd—Barbara; [mad,

She was in love; and he she loved proved And did forsake her: she had a song of willow [tune,

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her for— And she died singing it: That song, to-night, Will not go from my mind; I have much to But to go hang my head all at one side, [do, And sing it like poor Barbara. Prythee, [despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpun me here.—

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice, who would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

I.

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree, [Singing.

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee:

Sing, willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and softened Lay by these: [the stones,

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Prythee, lie thee; he'll come anon.—

II.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,— Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love, false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, &c.

If I court mo women, you'll couch with mo
men.*

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do doth that bode weeping? [itch;

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it is said so,—O, these men, these men!— [lia,—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emil,
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all

Emil. Why, would not you? [the world?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;
I might do't as well i' the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'Tis a great price

For a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should; and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring; nor for measures of lawn; nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition: but, for the whole world,—Why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I would venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and, having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right. [man.

Des. I do not think there is any such wo-

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many
To the vantage, as would store the world they play'd for.

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults.

If wives do fall: Say, that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps;

Or else break out in peevish jealousies,

Throwing restraint upon us; or, say they strike

Or scant our former having† in despite; [us,

Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace, [know,

Yet we have some revenge. Let husbands

Their wives have sense‡ like them: they see and smell,

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,

As husbands have. What is it that they do,

When they change us for others? Is it sport?

I think it is; And doth affection breed it?

I think it doth; Is't frailty, that thus errs?

It is so too: And have not we affections?

Desires for sport? and frailty, as men have?

Then, let them use us well: else, let them know,

The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night: Heaven me such usage send,

Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad, mend!
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I. A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare §, and put it home;
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow:

It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand; be bold, and take thy sword. [Retires to a little distance.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed:
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:—
'Tis but a man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies. [Goes to his stand.

ago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense||, [Cassio,

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I bobbd¶ from him,

As gifts to Desdemona;

It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril:

No, he must die:—But, so, I hear him coming.
Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he;—Villain, thou

[Rushes from his post, and makes a pass at CASSIO.

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy in-

But that my coat is better than thou think'st;
I will make proof of thine.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul.
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!
It is the cause—Yet I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.

[Takes off his sword.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me:—but once put out thine,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat,
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither:—I'll smell it on the tree.

But they are cruel tears: This sorrow's

It strikes, where it doth love.—She wakes.—

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime,
Unreconciled as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so loved

Thou gavest to Cassio.

Oth. I say, Amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! I never did
Offend you in my life; never loved Cassio,

But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And makest me call, what I intend to do,—
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then:
I never gave it him:—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Oth. That he hath—used thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell: Commend me to my kind lord; O, farewell.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's like a liar, gone to burning hell; 'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she, And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say That she was false; O, she was heavenly true!

Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio.

Nay, had she been true, If heaven would make me such another world Of one entire and perfect chrysolite, I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first; An honest man he is, and hates the slime That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iterance? woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman. I say, thy husband: Dost understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart; She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven, Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,

As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed, I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,

Though I lost twenty lives:—Help! help, ho! help!

The Moor has kill'd my mistress; Murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, and IAGO.

Mon. What is the matter!—How now, general?

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false:

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was Iago. I did.

* It is supposed that some theatrical direction has been omitted, and that, when Othello says, "So, so," he then stabs her. After the repetition of wounds, Desdemona might speak again with propriety, and yet very soon expire.

I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece, [stopp'd:

I know, this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead;

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out;—I hold my peace, sir? no:

No, I will speak as liberal† as the air;
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Emil. I will not.

For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confessed his

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.
Will you, I pray you, demand that demi-devil,

Why he hath thus insnared my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: What you

Cas. I found it in my chamber:

And he himself confess'd, but even now,
That there he dropp'd it, for a special purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you
I have done the state some service, and they know it;

No more of that:—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you

speak
Of one, that loved not wisely, but too well;

Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,

Like the base Judean, threw a pearl away,
Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose sub dued eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees

‡ Judgment.

The beauties of this play impress themselves so strongly upon the attention of the reader, that they can draw no aid from critical illustration. The fiery openness of Othello, magnanimous, artless, and credulous, boundless in his confidence, ardent in his affection, inflexible in his resolution, and obdurate in his revenge; the cool malignity of Iago, silent in his resentment, subtle in his designs, and studious at once of his interest and his vengeance; the soft simplicity of Desdemona, confident of merit, and conscious of innocence, her artless perseverance in her suit, and her slowness to suspect that she can be suspected, are such proofs of Shakspeare's skill in human nature, as, I suppose, it is vain to seek in any modern writer. The gradual progress which Iago makes in the Moor's conviction, and the circumstances which he employs to inflame him, are so artfully natural, that, though it will perhaps not be said of him as he says of himself, that he is a man not easily jealous, yet we cannot but pity him, when at last we find him perplexed in the extreme.

There is always danger, lest wickedness, conjoined with abilities, should steal upon esteem, though it misses of approbation; but the character of Iago is so conducted, that he is from the first scene to the last hated and despised.

Even the inferior characters of this play would be very conspicuous in any other piece, no only for their justness, but their strength. Cassio is brave, benevolent, and honest, ruined only by his want of stubbornness to resist an insidious invitation. Roderigo's suspicious credulity, and impatient submission to the cheats which he sees practised upon him, and which by persuasion he suffers to be repeated, exhibit a strong picture of a weak mind betrayed by unlawful desires to a false friend; and the virtue of Emilia is such as we often find, worn loosely, but not cast off, easy to commit small crimes, but quickened and alarmed at atrocious villanies.

The scenes from the beginning to the end are busy, varied by happy interchanges, and regularly promoting the progression of the story; and the narrative in the end, though it tells but what is known already, yet is necessary to produce the death of Othello.

Had the scene opened in Cyprus, and the preceding incidents been occasionally related, had been little wanting to a drama of the most exact and scrupulous regularity.—JOHNSON.
